Nation can't compare to school

Running on a full load ...

As the Nation's economy heads deeper and deeper into a recession, the word inflation becomes a household word. Tickets to the movies soar to $3.50 a seat, clothing expenses become almost unaffordable. It seems that the average person is always broke and students and parents alike are running on empty.

The Nation is also hit at this time with an energy crisis. The U.S. can't produce enough fuel for the nation and the economy slowly starts depreciating. It suddenly cost the average home owner three times as much to heat and cool his home now. The price of gas soars to a record, one dollar a gallon, and keeps going higher. Seemingly, the country is running on an empty load.

Four bags of groceries for how much? Something that is not new to us is the price of food and other items in the stores. As cost have doubled making necessities almost unaffordable.

Is the country running on an empty load? Seemingly people are running low on energy as it becomes a daily task to fill the gas tank.

Situations are just the opposite for students and faculty members at the high school. The school is running on a full load and advancing with pride.

Individual instruction is difficult with an average of thirty students per classroom and motivation to get to class on time is aided by a crowded morning

Five dollars and twenty-five cents! An exaggerated example of inflation is the cost of school supplies and other necessities of the basic student.

Building new architecture is much the same as the building of school spirit, especially for a school that is running on a full load.

I.O.U. Bills, bills, and debts are more of how today's society lives with the soaring prices of goods and services.

1/2 Total Sales: With the price of gas over a dollar a gallon, and still on the trend upward, pumps go to  $\frac{1}{2}$  the sale to accomodate the load.

Movie lines become extinct as the price of a show ticket goes to well over 4 dollars a seat, so students and parents alike find different means of entertainment.

hallway just behind you. Buses and washrooms especially appear to fall short of accomodating a growing pushing school.

The school's being situated in the middle of three growing communities; Schererville, St. John and Dyer, which has had a great effect on its progress. Even with the addition of a new school wing, which has added two year prior, the communities growth rate has managed to stay ahead of the building plans. Sportswise, the school was running ahead by starting off the season with a powerful three series winning

No seventh hour class! Scheduling can be a problem for some students who wish to beat the system and take an abundance of class in the schools six periods.

Running on a full load can be related to both school activities as well as other activities, displayed by the load one takes on in moving.

A sign of relief, as students file out of the confinement of the school buses upon their arrival to school.

Borrowing desk was an everyday occurrence for students in Mr. Paris's sixth hour economics class as there were not enough seats to accomodate the number of students in the class.

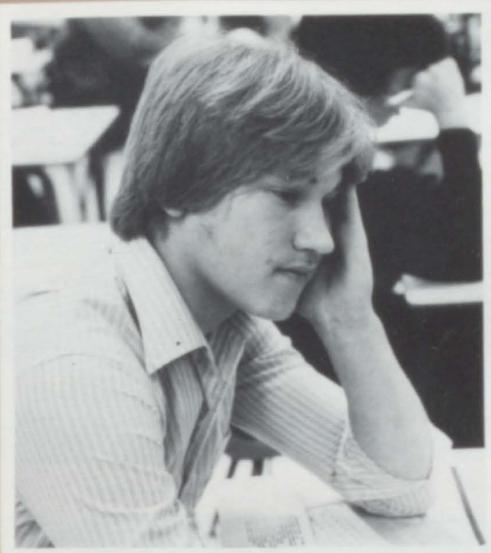

streak for the football season.

Academically, students were moving ahead with a load of new courses, new textbooks, a group of new teachers and a big load of homework which brings all the pleasures of school back to spirit. In organizations, clubs begin pushing ahead with fund raisers, which are a part of every school year, for trips and other activities. Most clubs start off the year by making a big load of money.

Individually speaking, classes begin planning for the year's happenings. Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors all take on different loads by plan-

Crowds, crowds, crowds, faces new and old appear at sporting events, supporting the teams with school spirit.

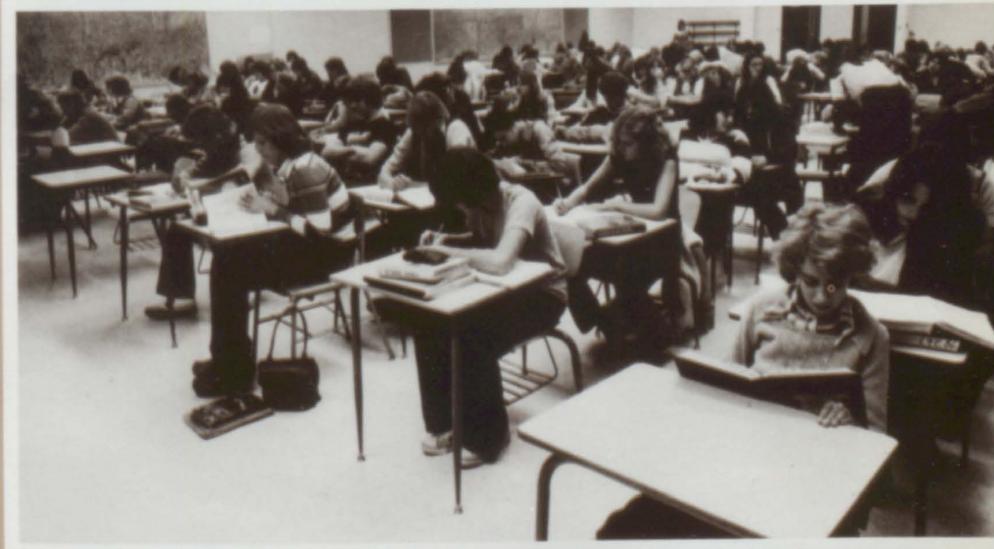

Speaking of loads, all students carry the burden of planning their years in advance and scheduling is just one part of that load.

Buses, buses, and more buses, transportation for a great majority of students to and from school is by that big yellow carriage, which makes for an extreme load on buses and drivers.

Welcome, Dr. Clune made a second welcoming speech of the year as striking teachers returned to school after three weeks of school closings.

Overcrowded classrooms: Many students had to make changes in their schedules because of over population in some specific classes, an example is the study hall.

ning for everything from Prom to Graduation.

Overloaded feelings may be strange to new comers to the school, for incoming freshmen at first, and even for experienced students and administration at the beginning, but in time everyone gets into the groove and continues to move on at a full pace just as always, taking all matters for granted that we are running on a full load.

U.S. 41 once graced on both sides with farm land, is now busting with new businesses and advertising billboards.

Can I have a desk to myself? No, there just is not enough chairs to go around. Classrooms are now to the point where they just accomodate the number of students in the class.

Washrooms become a source of meeting hall, as students gather for discussion during passing time, which makes them impassable.

Breaking the hoop, by bringing in the football season with the team running with a 4-0 lead, starting off a good season

Electronics being a demanding field, now finds its classrooms running on full loads.

Transportation, the best way to sum up this word is by another word buses. Buses are the main transport for students making their loads important ones.

Overloaded by the pains of homework, is Lisa Lolis, who makes a desperate attempt to make it to class on time after visiting her locker.

Ooops, they sure don't make lockers big enough anymore, especially for a student who is running with a big load.

Three over and three more to go, Students look forward to eating lunch and talking after going through the pressure of a school day.

Filling in the time

Running full with activities and occasions is the 1980 school year, just waiting for time to pass and each event to make its entrance. Step by step goes by, as each student anxiously awaits each coming school event. Homecoming draws closer and closer and students and administration alike begin planning and working toward this main event. Floats are constructed, halls are decorated, and students participate in the craziness of spirit week. Then time elapses and Winter Formal soon takes its blossom.

"Jane, who are you going to ask to the formal?"

"What are you going to wear?"

"I wonder what kind of flower he will buy me?"

Then Prom takes its night. Suddenly, you never heard so many people talking about dressing up, and going out to eat. Soon graduation will take place and all of the awards assemblies and end of the school year dinners will summarize the year's happenings to a finish. But soon many other events will take place and will replace the one before, perhaps with a better and more enjoyable moment. But as the case may be each event only last but a short time. Each activity must end and become only but a fond memory. With a school year that is running on a full load, there should be many fond memories for all to keep and cherish.

In keeping with the times, it is seemingly apparent that the economic conditions of the United States are not the best. The outlook is simply that the US is running on an empty load.

This is made apparent by the fact that the gold standard continuously jumps around, hitting a record high of over 700 dollars an ounce, with silver following suit. Many people begin wishing that they had invested in gold rather than the American dollar.

As the value of money continues to depreciate, the price of oil steadily goes up with the OPEC nations using their influence to increase the price of exporting crude oil. Once we receive oil from overseas there is not much that we can do with it since recently major oil refineries have gone on strike. As they say one strike leads to another, this is true for

Chrysler, Iran, SALT, Afghanistan ... Major headlines and stories seem to continuously come about as events turn for the worse, as the US goes through a slight recession.

A feeling of joy and peace was about as Pope John Paul II makes a US tour speaking to the people about women in Church offices, abortions, and other religious topics in Chicago.

Better outlook for the United States

most faculty and students at LC, as they encountered a three week long teachers strike many weeks prior.

With sky rocketing prices and the shortages of gas, big cars don't seem to be selling. Ask an expert, Chrysler. The Chrysler Corporation went in debt, and sought the aid of the government to relieve them of their money problems. While other car manufacturers slow their productions and continue to lay off employees as an answer to their problems,

With all of our economic problems at home, this was no avail to the problems over seas. Over 50 American citizens were taken hostage in Iran by radical students after a take over of the US embassy. Over 70 days citizens were kept away from their homes, with families suffering through the holiday seasons with their loved ones. As this problem seemed to have a better outlook the Soviet Union went in and took over the country of Afghanistan. To many this felt like a time of war.

Through a better outlook of events, peace of mind and country was presented by a Papal visit of Pope John Paul II. The Pope made a US tour and visited the city of Chicago bringing about wise words and a feeling of admiration to the million people, who assembled to see him give mass in Grant Park.

Even though SALT II was postponed, Egypt and Israel began their peace talks in hopes of a better world.

Russian take over, Iran Crisis, With US hostages being taken in Iran, and the Russians taking over Afghanistan, the only talk of peace was between Egypt and Israel.

Record amounts, as the price of gold takes a tremendous leap of over 700 dollars an ounce, with the price of gas following suit, the value of the American dollar continues to depreciate.

Red, yellow, green: Construction has finally begun on the school intersection for a long awaited traffic light to enable better exiting of students and buses after school.

"School is officially opened, but classes will not be held!" This was a well known saying for most students as teachers went on a three week long strike.

Where can this be stored? Tim Kelly, graduate of 1979, discovers little need for the expensive snow thrower purchased before winter.

An old fashioned snow scene is brought back with the first awaited snow fall of the decade.

Up on the housetop. As we were plagued with the winter of 79, icicles formed from the roofs of many homes.

Visions of the past haunt us as a likeness of Frosty has not yet been able to be recreated in the winter of 1980.

Invasion from outer space? No, this is the attire used for snowmobiling as modeled by Mr. Wells.

House full of snow? In the infamous winter of 1979, snow accumulated until it reached window level at the homes of many people.

Snow thrower for sale—cheap!

The first day of winter approached and the region waited, but not with idle hands. No winter snowstorm would catch them unprepared again—not for the fourth straight year!

With a yearly broken record of snowfall that exceeded 89 inches during 1978-79, rumors began early. Leakage from one reliable source predicted 200+ inches, and a few people in the midwest escaped this rumor's publicity. Weather forecastors refused to go out on a limb: Yes, there could be that much snowfall, but they didn't think so. Caterpillars and farm animals were carefully examined, while most north state Hoosiers adopted a just-in-case attitude.

Snow throwers took up storefront space and came in bigger models than ever before. Groceries and staples were stock piled by families. Snowmobiles were ordered early.

And the region waited.

Abnormal weather—high 50's—occurred Christmas week, and weather bureaus retreated to the all-but-forgotten line of you: There will be snow on Christmas Eve but it will be gone by morning. Yes, not even a white Christmas. Of course, January and February held some promise with extreme cold, icy roads and heavy roads, but nothing could compare to the preparedness of the region.

There is something a little disappointing about an average winter in the Midwest. There's just nothing to be proud about; but for winter lovers, beauty could be found, if not in abundance.

Skiing anyone? Not for Tami Wells and many others who had planned a winter full of skiing.

The falling of the white stuff. To many people, winter offers as much beauty as the summer sun.

A variety of expression is present when board members entertained questions from the audience at a board meeting occurring during the strike.

Suggestions included getting ahead on term papers or projects at a workshop given for students several days into the strike.

It isn't a pledge, but Dr. Clune's attitude the day of return was meant to unify the staff.

One day's pay also greeted most teachers the day they returned to work. Mr. Todd performed the honor.

"Grades are due tomorrow—at 7:30 am!" Mr. Todd informed the returning faculty. Grade cards were delayed by the strike.

A two-hour late start-up continued the first day back, and the high school started with a faculty meeting in the library.

Before the strike was eminent, board members picketed the high school early one morning to tell their side.

In a unified effort to occupy strike time effectively, teachers prepared an enrichment program for students of all levels.

Binding arbitration is not too much to ask on the part of the teachers, according to senior Jeff Scott. Scott was one student who spoke out at a board meeting.

Striking teachers called un-American

"Now, what is the predicate?" asks teacher.

"Are the teachers going to strike?"

"I hope not; now back to predicates."

"When are they going to strike?"

"Please, let's keep our minds on the lesson."

"If there is a strike, will you participate?"

Early into the school year academic concentration was interrupted by questions like these, and hours before the beginning of the second six weeks period the decision became official. This was to be the third teachers' strike at Lake Central, convening at such time when students were anxiously awaiting the first grade card of the year, and ending only after a judge issued a court order demanding that the more than 230 striking teachers return to work.

Another day was lost to the classroom when teachers appeared before Judge Pinkerton, who determined they were un-American in their activities.

The nightmare could continue as weeks became months before both teams realized compromise.

"I think I'll vote for . . ." Princesses were chosen from each class and the queen was chosen among them at the dance.

"What's a lovebug?" The favors were handcrafted especially for this event by Mrs. Thelma Crawford.

Snow holds off for formal; Six inches fall next day

History almost repeated itself when six inches of snow fell two days after the annual Winter Formal. Last year a blizzard cancelled the formal two times postponing it for a month after the scheduled date.

Fortunately this year the snow came later. On Saturday, February 23, the N-Teens presented "Love Bug" at the Serbian American Hall in Crown Point. Music was provided by the Terry Felus Trio Plus One.

Senior Missy Duncan was chosen queen along with her court of princesses, Sue Szpak and Linda Hayes.

To coincide with the theme for the evening, lovebug favors were hand-made. N-Teens sponsors, Mrs. Lynn and Miss Stemp, aided the girls in preparing for the formal.

As the large crowd chatted and laughed with each other, had photographs taken of the memorable evening, and enjoyed a classy meal, it was not uncommon to see couples leaving the dance floor for a fast trip to the nearest door or window. Just a little peak outside at the weather made guests relax and enjoy the evening to the fullest. February guests were saved until the last day; February 29 saw school dismissed because of weather.

The new reigning queen, Missy Duncan and her escort Mike Hines dance to the song sung especially for them.

"The Best of my Love." During the popular slow dances, the floor fills with close dancing couples.

"How about some punch?" Pastries and punch were served as refreshments for dancers taking a break.

"For our next song ..." Back for the third time in four years, the Terry Felus Trio Plus One provided music.

"Sign in please ..." Couples were encouraged to sign the guest book as they entered the hall.

"Go out there . . . and get 'em!" In the last seconds of the game, Coach Strawbridge encourages the JV team to victory.

Stand up and yell it! INDIANS! The cheering section proudly shouts out "Indians" to let the Lafayette Broncos know who's ahead on the scoreboard.

"Like my hat?" Showing her spirit, Debbie Kirschner proudly displays her crazy hat.

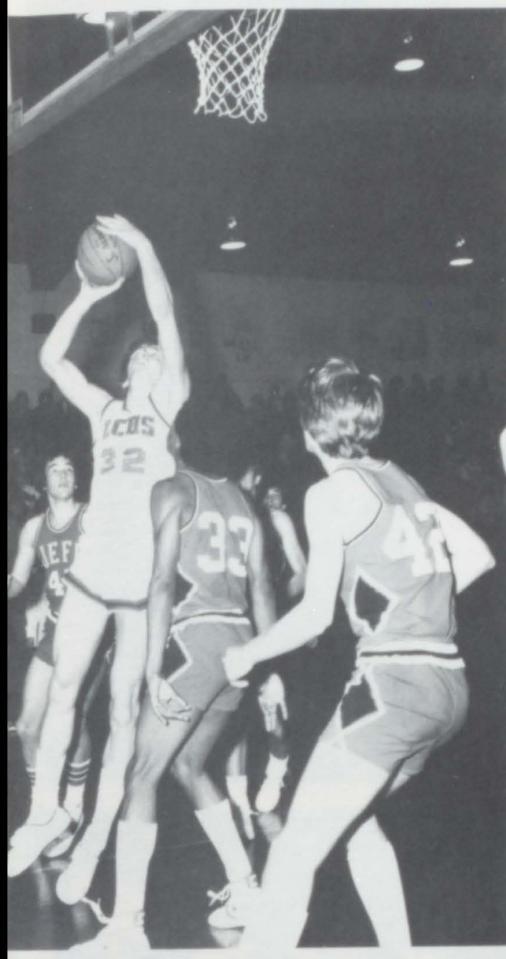

Homecoming king and queen are . . . Carol Harrision and Willie Penman from the senior class. Vicki Tewell presents Carol with flowers and her crown.

From one beer lover to another, Stroh's! The ever-popular Stroh's Pit presents its unique float driven by Bill Howe.

"Here come the Indians" as Varsity players Scott Morrison and Scott Andrews burst through the hoop for their last homecoming game.

Homecoming game disappoints fans

Traditions seem to be a thing of the past now that almost every tradition has been broken at least once. Basketball Homecoming is one tradition that still survives. However, the dance was cancelled, breaking yet another tradition.

On the night of the game, February 16, against Lafayette Jefferson, the two equally-matched teams battled it out ending with Lafayette Jeff in the lead, 70-69. The game was a heartbreaker for the Indians. The Broncos won on a last second 20-foot shot at the buzzer.

In the past two years the tradition of king and queen being seniors has been broken. However, the tradition came back this year when the king and queen were elected from the Senior Class—Carol Harrison and Willie Penman. Princesses and princes were juniors, Suzy Grambo and Rick Daniels; sophomores, Kelly Fehrman and Steve Scott; and freshmen, Beth Johnson and Brad Teibel.

The tradition of the float competition was broken last year because of the fire, but was revived this year with the seniors

Get up there, Dirk! Six-foot-three Dirk Fehrman out jumps his Bronco opponent.

"We want two!" The crowd cheers as JV player Frank Barsic jumps up taking careful aim at the hoop and scoring another two points for the Indians.

Homecoming truly started Monday, February 11, when most floats were being developed and each day of the week was set aside for a different way of dress. Monday crazy socks were worn. Cowboys and Indians were seen roaming the halls Tuesday promoting spirit for the weekend game. Wednesday was crazy hat day and Thursday, Valentines Day, was dress-up day. On a typical Friday jeans and jerseys were worn.

Assemblies are another scarcity this year. The second pep assembly of the year took place Friday, January 15, promoting spirit for Saturday's game. Despite the loss, Indian pride was still evident.

Make dogfood out of Broncos. The prize-winning float by the seniors was driven by Laura Dunn.

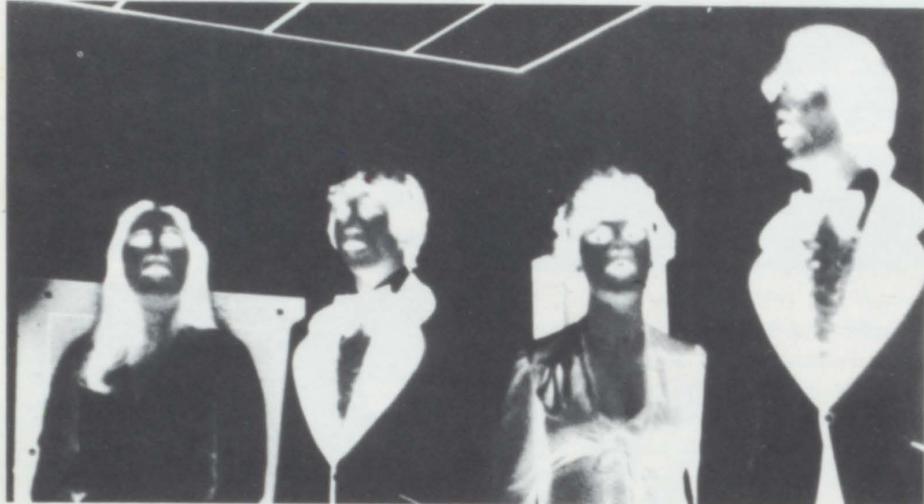

Intense concentration is shown by the new varsity coaches, assistant coach Zimmer and head coach Hammel, as the game draws to a close.

Pride and joy are expressed by Mary Grant, Tim Peyton, Kerry Bellamy and Ron Burns as they perform the Christmas music.

It's Christmas in St. John! An Enjoyable experience for both occurred when the Madrigals sang for the senior citizens in the cafeteria.

In perfect harmony Jeanne Nunez sings her part to blend perfectly with the others.

Will I be picked for Madrigals? Concert Choir members often practice on their own weeks before the all important tryouts.

Seven years; "superior"

For the seventh straight year in a row, a "Superior" rating was given to the Madrigals at the Valparaiso Stage Band Swing Choir NISBOVA contest, January 19. They presented their version of "Ease on Down the Road" from the Broadway play, "The Wiz" and "God Bless the Child."

Judged on singing, choreography and the instrumentals that played with them, they received the highest rating.

The Madrigals, consisting of seven girls and seven guys, are a main feature of the choral department.

Now in their ninth year, they perform for many banquets and dinners. Auditions are held each spring for interested Concert Choir members.

Through the silence could be heard the sound of Nickolette Mathews performing her solo during the song.

As the others pause, John Tennant takes the lead along with the other boys to create beautiful music.

A service that's more. Madrigals also sing for money since the choral department is self-supporting, all monies for music must be earned.

An expression of creativity. Why do people sing? Madrigals sing from pride and practice, both originating from being chosen exclusively from Concert Choir.

Demonstrating style and excellence Joe Matura, Dina Yaney and Dave Piercy show their skills in music.

L.C. faculty men tie with Cubs in basketball game

"Ever since I was a little boy, I've always wanted to be a Chicago Cub," Mr. Ivan Zimmer admitted after being traded from the Indians' faculty to the Cubs for a night of preposterous basketball.

His lifelong dream was fulfilled when the Cubs asked him to play for their team because they were short one player. "When you're a professional athlete," kidded Zimmer, "you have to realize you can be traded at any time."

The game was all for fun and a money maker for the Letterwinners to help the Varsity basketball players go to the Elkhart Tournament.

Miraculously after four quarters, the game ended in a tie, 67-67. A special appearance was made by Cubby Bear who also humored the crowd.

Stop! Mr. Tom Linger tries to persuade Mike Krukow, but Krukow won't listen and goes ahead with his shot.

Hey! Hey! Hey! another basket. The Cubs' mascot's expression tells the crowd of another Cub's basket.

On the run, Mr. Richard Ossanna tries to keep his eye on the ball as he heads down court for a possible two points.

Shooting from the outer limits, Tony G. aims toward the basket anticipating another basket for the Indians.

Scoring two points for the Indians, Mr. Harry O'hare's shot goes straight through the rim.

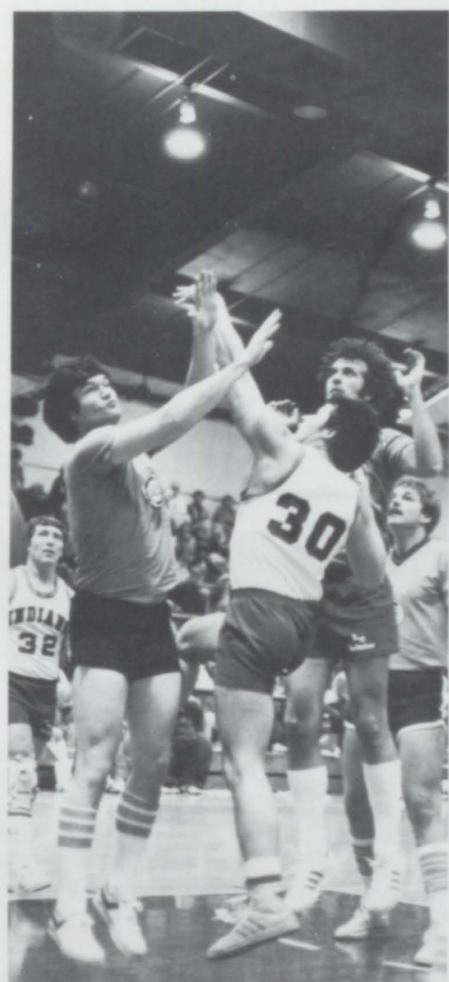

Sneaky footsteps is the technique that Mike Kruskow uses to disillusion Mr. Ossanna in hopes of gaining the ball.

Bringing the ball into play, Mr. Tom Ferguson begins to step in bounds in order to help his team capture a victory.

An arm's length away is another basket, compliments of Mr. Zimmer.

Swish! With style, is how Dennis Lamp goes about scoring two points for the Cubs.

Taking a chance on getting the ball is what Mike Vail hopes for and decides to join the crowd.

Everyone's all time favorite! The majorettes form a front line and prepare for a highkicking chorus line directed by Mary Roberts.

Clack! Click! Clack-Click! Tambaurines add a change in appearance and sound to "Gypsy Dance" performed by Vicki Mathews, Cheryl Duncan and Deann Mastey.

That's not a parking space! The marching Indians energetically mark off spaces representing the field in the parking lot.

1,2,3, and pause . . . Anne Perrings and Chris Pavlick lead the majorettes' front line in a catchy review.

Indians march for pros

"We still march!" was stated and worn with pride by the marching Indians, despite a temporary set-back when top honors from NISBOVA were out of the question as the Indians did not enter.

Beginning in 1962, the marching Indians amassed thirteen first place awards before the style began to change to the more formal drum and bugle corps format.

The answer: "We still march, if not at contest!" T-shirts told the story later and made way for a successful trip to Cincinnati where the Indians marched at half-time for the Bengals vs. Steelers NFL football game. This invitation made up for the NISBOVA defeat and paved the way for a successful year for the 100 plus member band.

Another honor was added January 10, when the majorettes and pep band entertained at the Illinois-Purdue Big 10 basketball game.

White gloves on her clarinet, Anita Buckmaster marches in place to keep a steady time.

Not that way—this way! Hours of effort under the hot sun went into remaining one of the few bands that still march.

Shake those pom-poms! Majorettes stand at attention awaiting the signal from the drum major.

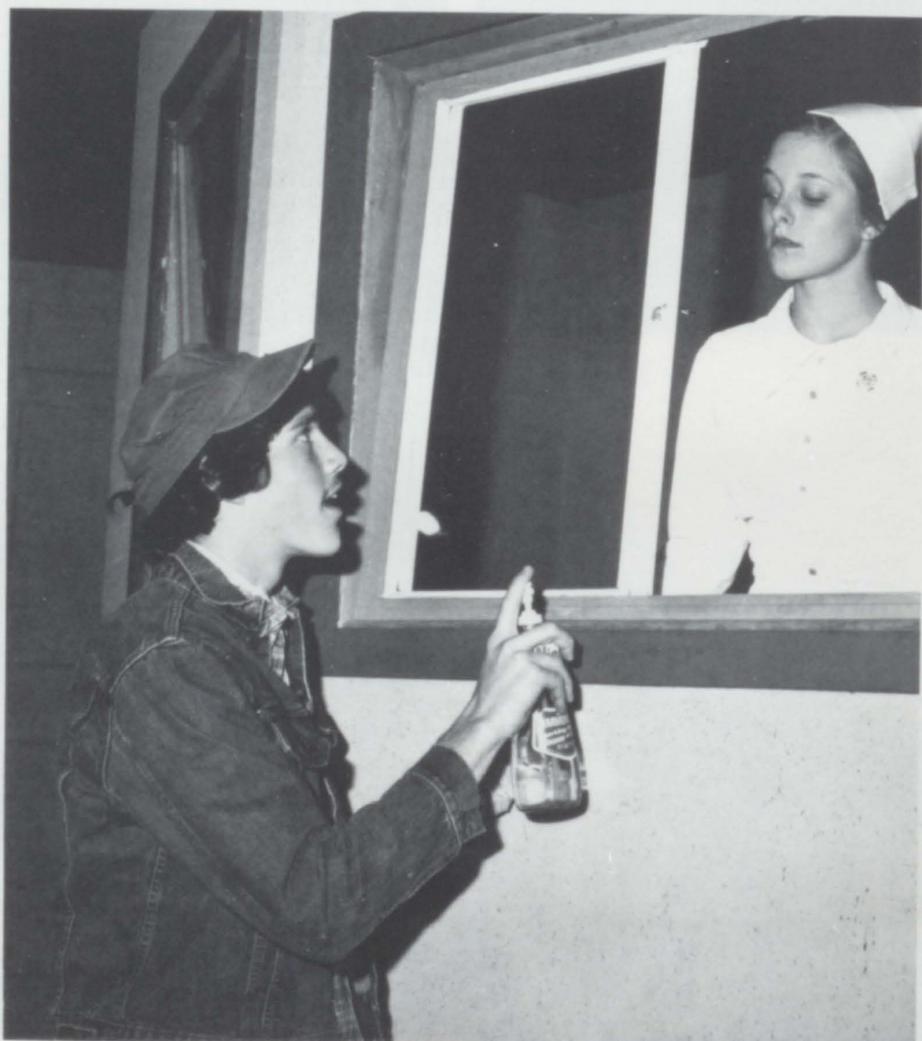

"Heya, heya, step right up folks. It is the battle of the century!" McMurphy sets up the bet with the other patients.

Are People Machines . . .? Jeff Scott (McMurphy) tries to understand the way Nurse Ratched (Mary Beth Gross) controls the patients.

This shouldn't hurt. Nurse Johnson (Janet Montgomery) preps Bruce Jung (Chief Bromden) for electrical shock.

I don't clean windows. McMurphy doesn't enjoy his job of cleaning windows, so he is going to get revenge on Nurse Ratched.

"Cuckoo's nest" is aired and staged

After long prepared evenings of rehearsal, opening night proved to be a great success, as the actors and actresses swept the audience off their feet with their version of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest".

The story of a group of mental patients in their daily routine lives managed to have a dominant influence over the audience.

The cast was headed by Jeff Scott as McMurphy and Mary Beth Gross as Nurse Ratched. The work and effort put into the play was exposed by the supporting roles of the rest of the cast.

The choosing of "Cuckoo's Nest" later proved significant when the original movie aired on national television shortly before it was staged here.

Just listen to what I have to say. McMurphy tries to "con" Dr. Spivey (Ferko Goldinger).

How does this ward work? Mr. Martini (John Tenant) and Mr. Harding (Bob Hammik) try to explain the way the ward is runned by Nurse Ratched.

A dominating influence. Nurse Ratched manipulates the patients at the group meeting, as Nurse Flynn (Barb Koremenos) and Mr. Scanlon (John Figler) look on.

Keeping a close watch. Monica Montella (Maxine) and Mari Grant (Candy) try to understand the two chronicics.

Stroke, stroke, stroke . . . before swimming meets, team members practice with old T-shirts and arm paddles, in order to get used to the feel of timing shirts without tiring for the meet.

Torpedo one, fire! No, not a real torpedo but the look and feel of one, demonstrated by swim team members as their practice starts.

"Smack, that had to have hurt!" this poor sport showed the hard way of getting into the pool as he belly-flopped from the high dive.

On you mark, get set, go, some people try to get a little edge on others, as he hits the water before giving his partner the advantage of leaving the deck.

Exploring the deep, this gym class swimmer on her last breath searches out the depths of the pool while looking for new adventures.

Perfect dive, only ending with a perfect finish, as Doug Keck recovers from a one and a half twist dive.

20,000 leagues under the sea???

Flop, twist, and kick, it is not a new dance but rather a swimming turn, which is of major importance in making a good time in swimming events.

Big breath of air and under he goes . . . this swimmer makes a desperate attempt to make it the length of the pool with one breath.

With the arrival of a recently built pool, it was thought that the concept of swimming, diving, and other water events should be brought to the students in a different manner.

What a better way to capture the actions of swimmers, than to get into the water yourself.

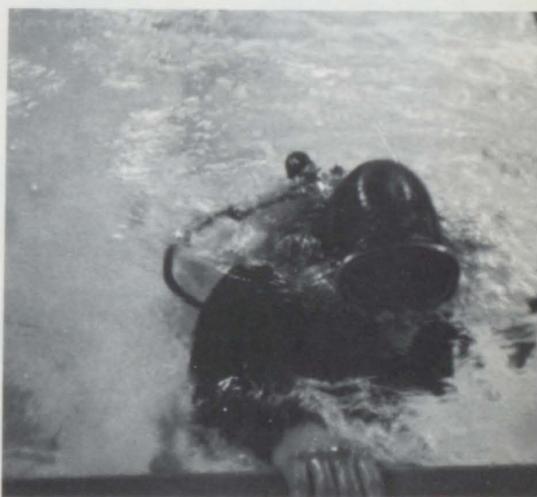

Through the great generosity of Mr. Gene Korba, who borrowed the school his underwater camera, and the skill of Mr. George Schulp, who gave of his time as a scuba diver, enabled a new look at the swimming department, as brought about by the eye of the camera.

Swimmers in their own liquid world of water are displayed in a more prospective view to those of the world of land. Everything from the amateur's belly-flop to the professional like dives and turns of swimmers is captured at an angle never seen before in the yearbook.

Expressions and other remarkable figures are shown of swimmers, which the swimmer himself could never have imagined making.

Everything from the hard struggling actions of the swimming team in practice, to the enjoyment and excitement of water polo or water basketball, to even the new development of community open swimming is all pursued in the world of water at the school pool.

Bubbles and more bubbles, swimming is like another world, and the scenery is created by the air and turbulence when this swimmer dove in the pool.

Is it a frog? No, it is only Mr. George Schulp, who aided in the capturing of these and other photographs by use of his scuba diving skills.

Runners take your mark . . . Participants step out as the gun goes off to start the boys mile run.

Pull . . . pull . . . Struggling for the championship title freshman, Gene Yukon, gives it all he's got.

Screeching toes and skinned fingers were all a part of the battle of strength.

Frustration and defeat were expressed by the faculty men when they were beaten by the freshmen.

Freshmen and juniors tie in turkey trot

As the gun went off both sides tightened their grip on the large rope and pulled with all their might. At first the white flags did not move, but slowly they steadily moved to the right when finally the whistle blew and the freshmen guys were declared the winners of the tug-of-war.

The freshmen girls were not as fortunate as the guys; the junior girls defeated them and both the seniors and the women faculty with ease.

The annual Turkey Trot was the Letterwinner's fun way of celebrating the Thanksgiving holiday.

"Hang in there!" screams the crowd as the junior girls demonstrate the strength that overcame the frosh, seniors, and faculty women.

"Wheel your own barrel!" What looks easy proves exhausting for Filomena Scalzitti and Coleen Kerwin.

The senior "muscle men" of last year were unfortunately taken down by the incoming freshmen.

"Get my chicken ready!" A winning feeling comes over Mary LePort in the hop sack race.

"The deadline is tomorrow!" Finishing his last page, Quiver Editor, Joe Matura, gets material ready to mail.

From a different angle, Sports Editor, Lisa Smith, prepares the rough draft for an upcoming column in the SCOUT.

Top: Checking the calendar, Holly Thomas, Editor of the SCOUT, assigns the stories for the coming week's edition.

Workshops offer head start on ideas

One student hides in the hallway, one's in the washroom, another crouches in an unseen corner with a flashlight, still another is collapsed from exhaustion after evaluation each night. These are some of the things experienced by people at workshops and camps.

Much of the hard work has paid off for four individuals. Holly Thomas, Scout editor, was chosen runner-up for a Journalism Scholarship to Ball State University. Lisa Smith, sports editor, received an award for Outstanding Sports Reporting. Awarded a certificate for best theme development in yearbooks, was Joe Matura, Quiver editor.

Awards were not limited only to those interested in writing. Wendy Smyser was chosen to play first violin in the World Youth Symphony Orchestra. She attended the Fire Arts Camp at Interlocken, Michigan.

Group awards were given to both the cheerleaders and majorettes for the most school spirit.

Summer symbolizes vacation, fun, and free time, but it is also a time to learn new skills and get a head start on the coming year.

Though most participants agree that workshop days are busy, the ideas shared with students from different schools are always a valuable asset in the planning of a complete school year.

Many hours of practice and concentration go into learning music as Wendy Smyser demonstrates.

"5...6...7...turn!" The majorettes use their skills from camp in the routines for the half-time shows.

"Team we say, Good Luck!" Inspiring the freshman football team, the cheerleaders display their talents by building a pyramid.

And the winners are . . .

With the advent of Homecoming Week, memories from the thirteenth year came floating back. September proved to be another weather record breaking month when not a drop of rain fell in the Calumet Region. A heavy downpour complete with hail and tornado warnings appeared October 1st only a couple of hours after school was dismissed. October 1st was the kick off to Homecoming Week, but the annual Powder Puff football game had to be postponed because of inclement weather.

However, Coach Comara's Varsity football team successfully played the Homecoming game four days later against the Calumet Warriors. In the last half, Doctor and Wietecha scored two touchdowns to Calumet's one. This made the final score 14 to 6. An appreciative Homecoming crowd enjoyed this eventful climax to the week's activities.

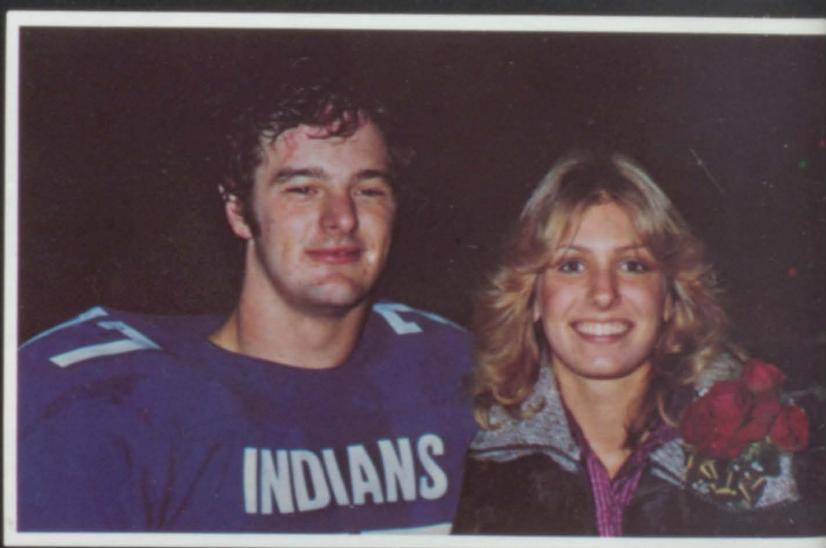

Representing the freshman class for the Homecoming Court were Denise Anton and Marty Knight. Sophomores were Denise Davis and Scott Wietecha, and from the Junior class were Karen Yarros and Mike Blaize. Crowned as King and Queen were Janet Frunk and Willie Penmen.

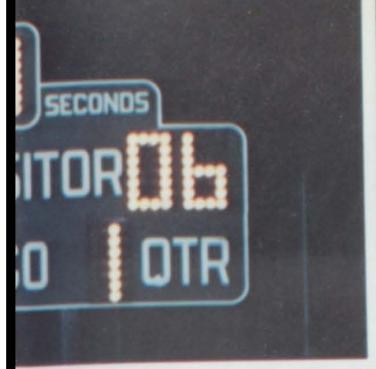

"Sophomores, sophomores are the best!" The Sophomore cheerleaders led the class to a victory in the yell contest after the traditional parade.

Pour it on 'em! The Juniors poured hours of work into the winning float.

Injured quarterback, Mike Wietecha pulled tendons in his foot after scoring the first touchdown.

"And the winner for the 79-80 homecoming queen is Janet Frunk." Willie Penman and Janet Frunk were all smiles when they were chosen as king and queen.

"5...4...3...2...1...0!" As the final seconds were counted down, the crowd was ecstatic over the victory.

"And this years queen is Janet Frunk!" Halftime festivities included the crowning of the queen, Senior Janet Frunk.

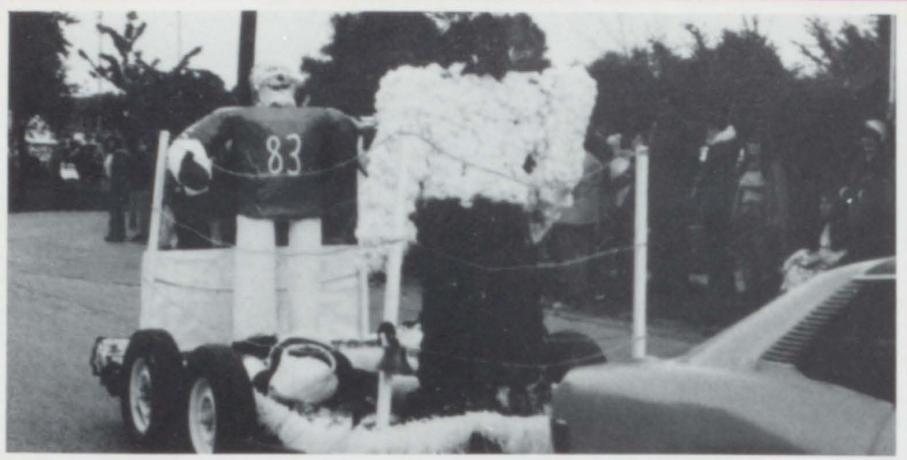

Make way, we're coming through. Making the holes for the offense, Willie Penman and Mike Hines block an oncoming Calumet opponent.

"First and ten, do it again." After turning on the speed, junior Dave Beil make it to the 20 yard line before being taken down.

Big Yella' likes everything big, that's why he is on the Indian side. LC had a big homecoming victory over Calumet.

"Sleet, rain, nor even snow" is going to keep the LC fans from coming to pronounce true spirit at the homecoming game.

"7 . . . 8 . . . 9 . . . 10 . . . you're out" Pulling their efforts together for the first time the freshman class "show-off" their float.

Cut . . Paint . . Paste . . Suzy Grambo shows scissor coordination in her contribution to the junior's hallway.

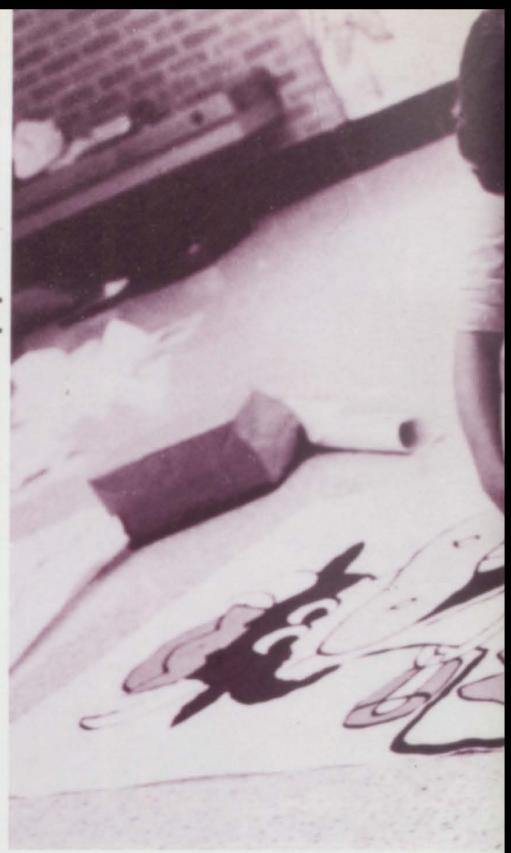

"Go . . fight . . win!" Sophomore Shelly Kapelinski participates in cheering the team on for a homecoming victory.

Leaping into first place the Junior Class displays their theme of cereal characters.

Smoke signals victory The Senior Class float featured Miss Piggy and other muppet characters.

The marching Indians lead the way in the annual Homecoming parade.

No dance but good spirit

"Yeah Juniors!" Junior Class president, Renee Prasco excitedly accepts the junior trophy for overall Homecoming achievements.

The flames of Homecoming spirit were ignited by junior Mike Blaize and other boys' cross country team members after the parade.

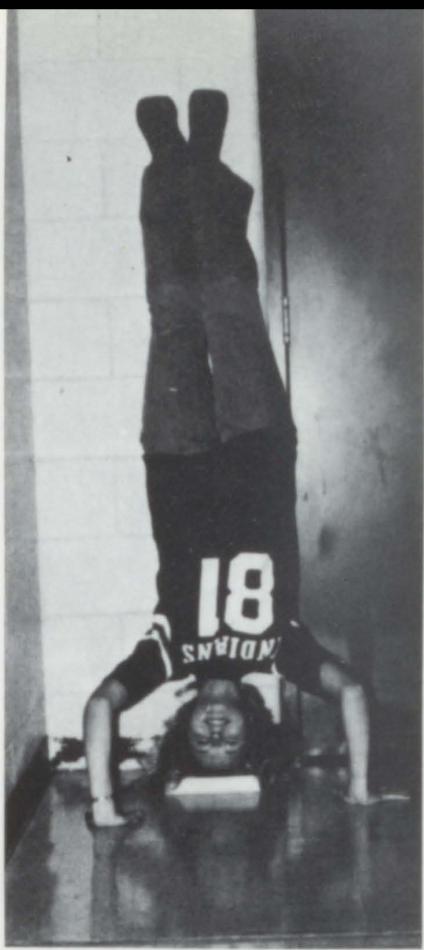

Give 'em the boot boasted the sophomore class float which finished third in the float competition.

Exhilarated by the impending victory at the Homecoming game, John Doctor leaves the field for last minute instruction.

Double trouble? Double exposure? No, it's Elaine Johnston and Patty Kerwin decked out for Twinkie Day.

"How long can she hold it?" Junior Crystal Moor exhibits enthusiasm and spirit during Homecoming Week.

"What does the crowd see?" None other than the Lake Central team fighting for an Indian victory.

"Go... Fight... Win...!" Sophomore Shelly Kapelinski participates in cheering the team on for a Homecoming victory.

"Excitement, spirit, and enthusiasm" were all ingredients used in the Pep Club's Homecoming float.

"Hut 1, Hut 2, Hut 3, Hike!" Mike Wietecha yells, as Ron Hedrick hikes the ball, during the Homecoming game against Calumet.

A hairy favorite displays the pair that didn't win—recognize the legs of Tim Luksaik?

"80 ... 81 ... 82 ... 83 ..." Each class represents themselves during Homecoming Week as Laurie Vido, Mariza Mendez, Judy Schwietzer, and Beth Johnson.

"Here they come." Denise Davis and Scott Wietecha the 1979 Homecoming prince and princess of the sophomore class.

The sexy legs belong to ...

"How about number seven?"

"No, they're too hairy!"

"Number eleven?"

"Not bad!"

A new attraction to Homecoming this year was a "sexy legs" contest among the football players sponsored by the cheerleaders. Votes were a penny each and the winner, Mike Wietecha, was announced at the pep assembly before the game.

Getting in the spirit of Homecoming Week, certain days were set aside for wearing special clothes. Tuesday was twinkie day, a day set aside for dress-a-likes, Wednesday was crazy hat day and Thursday was jean and jersey day. Bright new jerseys were purchased for the occasion. Paper ribbons were printed saying, "Go Indians" for Friday, ribbon day.

Many students added their own—blue and white color day—for ribbon day. Spirit Week offered a steady build-up of interest to get ready for the actual day of Homecoming, when hundreds of "Go Indians" ribbons joined in the traditional Homecoming assembly sixth hour.

"Listen Jesus to the warning I give." Warning Jesus of the crowd and how they will turn against him, Judas sings, Heaven on Their Minds.

"This Jesus Must Die!" Deciding that Jesus is dangerous if he goes on as "King," the high priests, Bruce Jung, Mike Hite, John Figler, John Tennant, sentence him to death.

"Everything's All Right." Comforting Jesus in his hour of need, Mary Magdalene, played by Janet Aaron, sings lamentingly to him.

Lights! Camera! Action! Words like these are thought to be only in the movies, but Jeff Lozier, Daryl Slusher and the lighting crew play an important backstage role in the play.

"This is my blood." At the last supper Jesus gives his disciples a ritual to remember him by that will last thousands of years.

"Hey, JC, you're all right by me!" The apostles are expressing their love for Christ while the Priests glare in anger at them.

Summer superstar encores in fall

Versatility reigned supreme when the Theatre Guild members snapped their talents from "Guys and Dolls" during the spring of 1979 to "Jesus Christ, Superstar" for the eighth summer season. Community comment and press coverage caused many to return for a second show.

Success of the play is proven by eight showings in July and the three fall showings in September. The cast was not the most important thing in the play; there were many people behind the scenes who aided in the successful production.

Taking the lead of Jesus of Nazareth was Tom Butoryak '74. Michael Berglund '77 portrayed Judas Iscariot and Mary Magdalene was played by Janet Aaron '79.

Playing the part of Pontius Pilate was Don Kasper '75. Because the try-outs are open to the public, there were participants from different schools as well as Lake Central alumni. These stars broadened the production possibilities that would have been more limited on a strictly high school level.

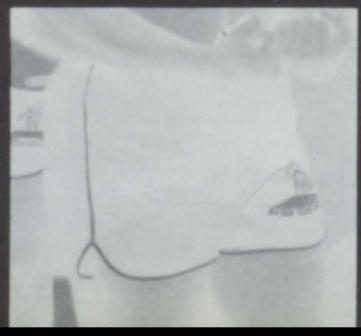

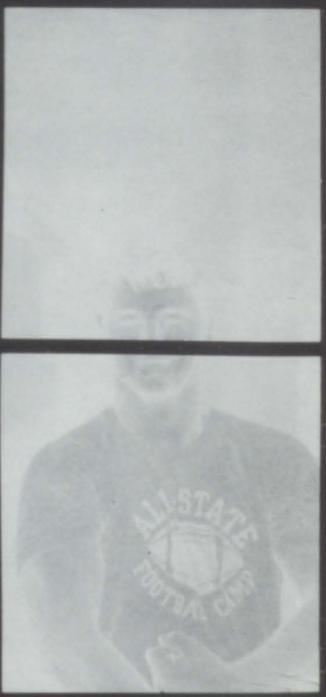

"Why do you not speak when I have your life in my hands?" After 39 lashes Jesus, played by Tom Butoryak, feels he has no reason to answer Donn Kasper, who is playing Pilate.

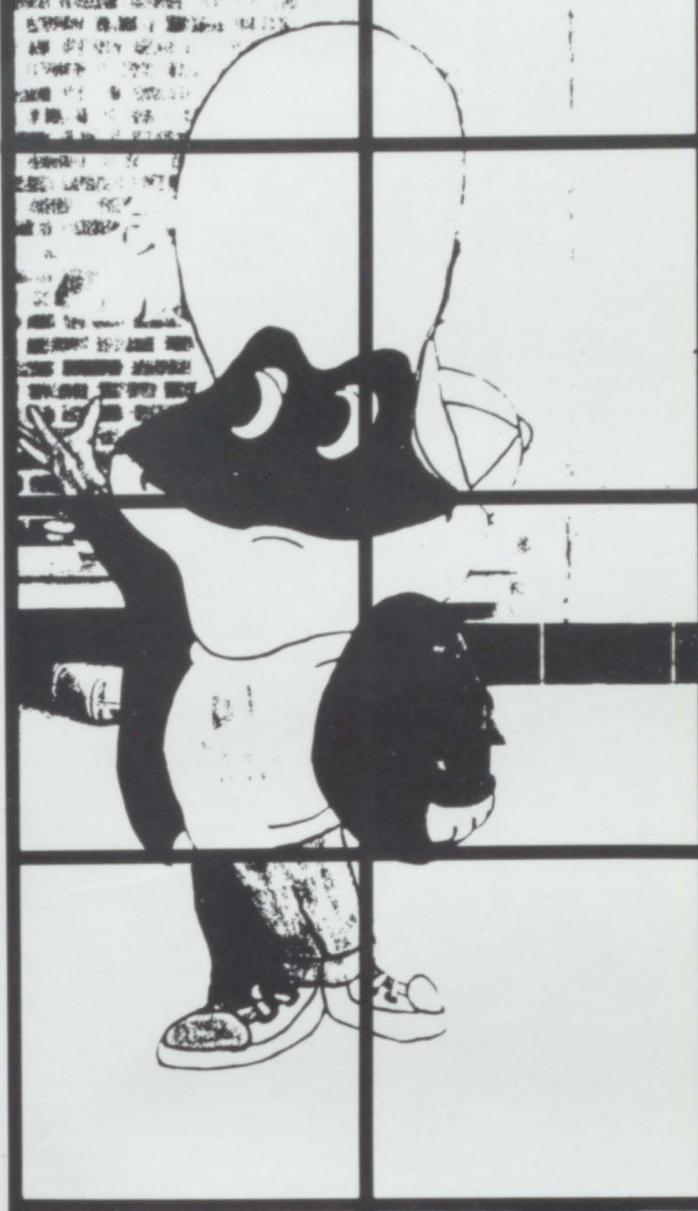

"C'mon, King of the Jews." Jesus is ridiculed by King Herod, Randy Noojim, and his girls, Nicole Pilakas, Janet Montgomery, Dee Dee Mastey and Amy Johnson.

Testing ... Testing ... Testing. As part of the sound crew, Tim Peyton adjusts the audio central board used for the many different sound cues.

What a big load . . . !

The individual experiences a gamut of feelings, often depending on how full the load is. And then, too, there are different kinds of loads for different problems. Or the load may become too heavy through no particular fault of the individual. First the math assignment was put off till Monday morning because of a really great movie being shown on television for the third time. But Monday morning the alarm failed to go off—now who could have changed that button?—and the bus was too crowded to work. And the individual's thinking: "Snow! Snow! Please Snow!" but it's only October...? Now if a Monday starts like this, chances are there will be three more homework assignments by lunch. When will the load ease up? While some people groan under the pressure of a heavy load, some people run on a full load. One thing is certain.

People

Individuals today have a tough time deciding whether they want to be known for their differences or their likenesses. How is it possible to do your own thing and fit into the peer group at the same time? Or, why does one individual tell everything he is thinking and feeling—whether or not anyone is listening—while another person sits quietly in the corner refusing to let anyone get a glimpse of that soul within? And how can neither accept the other and yet claim a free country? The importance of the individual? Perhaps his function with all others. Are we only as special as the parts we play? Why, then, do we choose such peculiar parts? Is the mainstream of life dependent upon the individual, or is the individual dependent upon the mainstream of life? Which, then, came first—the chicken or the egg?

School ends, life begins

... Eleven years of hard work plus a half day of kindergarten, accumulated in August 1979 when I joined approximately 500 seniors who registered for what was to be their most important year. Long meetings with my individual counselors took place early in the year to check my graduation requirements and to schedule last minute changes. Suddenly to me it was evident that this was my last chance to enjoy art, music, or even swimming.

Once the long awaited autumn arrives, there never seemed to be a dull moment, but there certainly are some penniless ones for me, the average senior.

School activities go on as usual, but this year they seem to have a special meaning to me. It's do it now or never.

In a short while it will be my turn to take those steps up the aisle and receive my diploma, but somehow it doesn't seem right. Me a senior! where have the years gone.

As I sit wondering a moment, I think about the past years of my life, and then ponder over what may lie ahead.

Then a call of my name; a piece of paper, and a friendly handshake. I look around and try to understand, then I turn my tassle and before I realize, it's over

OFFICE PERSONNEL: Mrs. Aaron, Mrs. Ruff, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Kerns, Mrs. Stabler, Mrs. Ring, Mrs. Wein.

"Oh no, my locker's jammed and my algebra assignment's inside!" cries a student while frantically twisting and turning the knob on his locker.

"Kick it!" his friend suggests. Of course kicking won't help; all it will do is make noise. What this student really needs is janitorial assistance.

"Let's get Floyd!"

Without Floyd and his crew, school life could be filled with problems. There would be no one to fix the pool filter, adjust the clocks, or wax the hallways. And who would tighten LC's loose screws and replace its burned out bulbs?

The maintenance staff is only one of the many groups in the school that help keep it running smoothly.

When a student is sitting in third hour listening to his stomach growl, there's usually only one thing on his mind—lunch! He, like many other students, take for granted the cafeteria ladies who prepare the beanie weanies, mixed vegetables, and pork chopettes he is hungrily dreaming of.

Seldom recognized for their faithful service to the school are the bus drivers. If it weren't for them running their daily routes through rain and shine and sometimes snow, there would be no organized system of student transportation.

Attendance slips, book rental, lost and found, schedule problems and miscellaneous questions are handled by the office personnel. If they can't help, who can?

Without these people ready to lend a helping hand or broom or pen, Lake Central just wouldn't be Lake Central.

Floyd Spoor, please ring the office

O Cedar makes your life easier Louise Crowley does her daily work with a broom in her hand and a smile on her face.

LC's own Laundromat Wilma Kanelopoulos helps to keep the swimmers dry by laundering the towels.

All Aboard! Driving a bus can be nerve racking, just ask a bus driver.

May I please go to the nurses office? Could finally answered in the affirmative when Mrs. Mary Ellen Krydynski joined the faculty. She has an AD and BSN degree in nursing as a family practitioner.

First place gather here

First in the halls! First in the parade!
First in Overall Homecoming Spirit! And first in the hearts of their classmates!

Juniors gathered steam and were obviously ready as shown by their tremendous achievements during Homecoming Week.

With such stamina going, the pace quickened as challengers were met during the annual Turkey Trot. Juniors tied for first against the freshmen.

Prom committees and plans were in session even before Christmas. Juniors prepared for their futures by utilizing available testing services and listening to guest speakers from various colleges and universities. Many took a part time job for the first time and learned to balance their time, without wasting it, so there could be time for work, study, pleasure, and sleep? What's that?

The junior year is most typically the one year that signifies the move into adult life and responsibilities, and these juniors were ready for the challenge.

Nervous is . . . your fourth driving test

The most important of future events, driving to school is finally attained by Junior Ann Perrings.

Alfred Wombat was an every day Junior at Lake Central High School. Except for today, for by the end of the day the world would be his.

He was nervous and fidgety all day and everything seemed to be going wrong. He missed the bus to school in the morning, so he had to walk six miles and missed his first hour class. With his last seventy five cents he bought a hot lunch and tripped on the way out of the lunch line only to see his potatoes and carrots all over the wall. He studied all night for an English test when it was chemistry he had the test in. And while nervously waiting for the 2:05 bell to ring he tripped while reaching to get his pencil, fell and broke his nose.

On the way home from the hospital Mrs. Wombat, Alfred's mother, made one special stop, the trip he had waited for all day, the License Bureau.

He passed the test, it was easy to see by the size of the grin on Alfred's face he didn't feel so bad now about his nose now.

As he was pulling out into the highway he was so excited he forgot to look to the left and he almost hit a bus.

Getting a driver's license and many other exciting things such as dating, parties and just spending time with friends all play a big role in being a Junior and you, yourself, is what makes it so special.

In your second, you try harder

Miss Ihnat and Mr. Pinerski served faithfully throughout the year as sponsors, helping choose money-making activities and plan ahead.

Members of the class cabinet huddle in the snow before attending a meeting with sponsors.

Classes, too, take on more meaning; projects become more difficult but also more interesting as the sophomore experiences certain advantages he didn't have before.

But the second year goes fast. Many are able to become licensed drivers toward the end of the school year, and new responsibilities are met. All of a sudden, it isn't such a chore to run to the store for milk or bread, or pick up Dad's suit from the cleaners—not if you can go on four wheels rather than the usual two.

In a few years many graduates will choose their sophomore year as the busiest happiest year in high school as well as a turning point into adult life. Going out with friends and starting to date are all a part of the sophomore year, making this year one of the most exciting.

Elected offices were filled by Nicol Pilackas, president; Mark Weidner, vice president; Linda Lovell, secretary; Shelley Kapalinski, treas.

School life is routine for sophomores

An unusual amount of pride swells somewhere between May of the freshman year and August of the sophomore year. Just the knowledge that the first unsure year of high has been successfully completed gives the new sophomore courage to attack the year and pride in what he sets out to accomplish. Usual yearly activities, such as electing class officers and a cabinet of workers, become a little more serious. More pride and excitement can be seen and heard as sophomores gather for yell contests and to decorate their hall for Homecoming. Money-making events can no longer be ignored, as suddenly the sophomore realizes he'll have a prom to plan and pay for in one more year.

Classes take on new interest as the basics that have been studied for years finally pass the prerequisite stage and the student passes into the awaited class.

Steve Mandich, along with other sophomores, concentrates on fjf, dkd, sls.

"Hurry up and wait" tells story of year for frosh

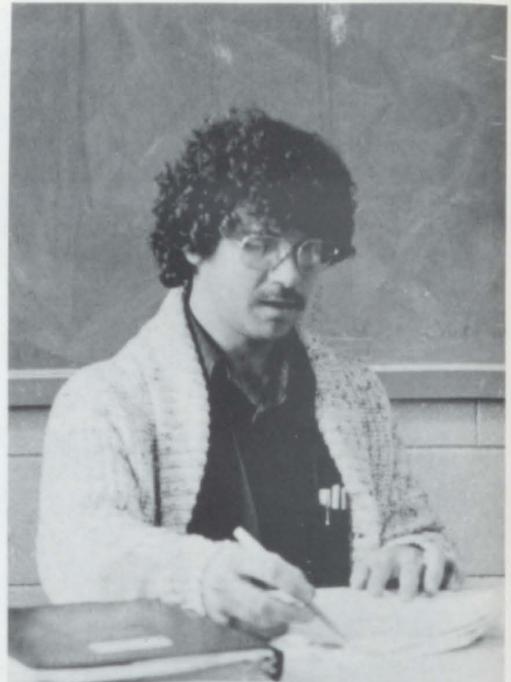

After all those years of waiting and growing to get to high school, it is a common happening for the typical freshman to get shot down the first week of school. The depression starts usually on the bus ride in to one of Lake County's largest high schools. They've all passed it thousands of times, but they never really took a look at it.

A bus—one of thirty-three—pulls up and the grandeur of the spreading complex that will house the next four important years lays before them; they know instantly they will get lost. Within the first week, they have met almost every upper classman no matter where they were hiding, and the word seniority takes on a new meaning. They look admiringly at seniors, even sophomores, and realize the waiting isn't over yet.

Much of the freshman spirit was a direct result of the enthusiasm of Mr. Randy Starewicz, class sponsor, who fired the frosh in their activities.

Shifting ... gears ... years ... tears ... fears

One year of high school is over for more than five hundred people who learned to shift their lives a few short months ago when they entered high school. Not everything turned out as was predicted. Friends changed. Classes changed. Interests changed. A few years dimension added new maturity as most were called upon to shift for themselves just a little bit more.

"Wake yourself up!"

"Fix your own breakfast!"

"If you can't remember to brush your teeth, they'll rot!"

"Those papers are due next Friday even if you are in the hospital!"

Rough sounding words, but they are simply what it takes to give a teenager confidence that he can shift for himself.

Laboratory learning was a new experience for many freshmen. Responsibilities included using equipment and working together on projects.

Corporation leaders stand together

As I read the pass, "report to the office immediately," my mind quickly tries to determine exactly what's up.

I think at one time or another the uncertainty runs through us all; have we too many absences, are we failing a class, or maybe there's an emergency at home. The authority of our school involves much more than a simple reprimand or expulsion. The administration of Lake Central provides leadership as well as discipline and supervision.

This year Lake Central operated quite successfully with the guidance of Joseph Clune, as principal, and assistant principals, Bernie Krueger, John Todd, Bob Daniels, and the new addition to the Lake Central administration, Rodney Ely.

Support and endorsement from the Central Administration was of great value to the direction of our school throughout this year. Little do we, the students of Lake Central, realize the hard work and long hours that go into the planning of curriculum, academics, and various other activities involved within our school.

The contributions of the members of our school board and Central Administration are often forgotten, in the day to day shuffle, from class to class. Yet we so seldom remember that they are what keep our school running smoothly.

So, the next time we enter the principal's office, and the thoughts race through our heads, let's just take that extra minute to remember how important the authority and leadership of Lake Central is, and just exactly where we'd be without it.

Striving onward . . .

Full speed ahead into the academic school year, students sought for term paper topics and researched ideas. Fiction and biographies were reported on and shop projects added interest for many who experienced electricity, auto, woods or metals shop. An immediate value was easier seen on a growing, shaping project than thirty-five note cards and five title cards. Educational goals change every so often, depending on what the society needs at that particular time. When it was common for women to stay in the home and teach their daughters, or sons, the arts of homemaking, such courses were not a necessity in the schools. Later, when time at home became more limited, added curriculums were expected in the schools. It has become the public schools responsibility to educate the individual to the highest degree in just about every area available. Discussion classes offering a chance to talk and be heard or a chance to be given sincere advice on social problems that confront youth and young adults today are considered an important part of most curriculums. Add to those classes the opportunity for college preparation in hundreds of areas, plus the important areas of a vocational training such as art, theatre, and sports for ideas on how to spend our days off. And, the general knowledge and basic information found in graduation requirements. Obtaining a high school diploma today really does mean running on a full load for four consecutive years, and perhaps there is too little time then even to pursue the things we'd really like to learn.

Working together. Billy Matthews must work as a perfectionist to ready the shows on Channel 50 for airing.

Point of view. Mr. Brist expresses his point of view to John Kozubal and other students during a rehearsal.

Last minute check. A staff member observes the accuracy of a finished portion of a Channel 50 broadcast.

Big Brother? No, this is a character generator that is one of the many pieces of equipment needed for transmitting.

Airing those airways

Popularity and necessity demand television and business courses. Chanel 50 operates out of the school and causes a rare opportunity for training in production and clarifies the mystery of how the television signal is sent and received into individual sets.

Radio TV class is offered as an alternative to senior English. Underclassmen of high standing may take both introduction to television where the studio basics are covered in the classrooms, and vocational television, offering on-the-job training for students who wish to make careers in the field.

Intensive office laboratory is the final preparation in the secretarial field and tries to duplicate as nearly as possible the setting found in an office. Other business offerings teach business machine operation, bookkeeping, typing, shorthand, filing, and practically all skills related to business.

Busily at work. Like most, Phyllis Grimmer struggles to keep her eyes on the book as she takes a timed writing in typing.

Somebody help! Sheryl Burke and Denise Peyton give each other assistance necessary whenever there is a problem in lab class.

Advice from the teacher. Mrs. Wilkins gives assistance to Kathy Neil as they figure exact steps for a particular assignment.

Hey, this is better! Vicki Hayes tests her typing speed after advancing to an electric typewriter.

Skills, trades open fields

You just can't weld in a study hall, but those students desiring this trade course were forced to try last year while the school searched the state for a qualified welding teacher. Students have an active interest learning to weld since it offers lucrative pay and is needed by almost every trade.

Beginning electrics students learn simple wiring techniques and begin plotting circuits for housing. This is prerequisite knowledge to the popular and advanced field of electronics, where some principles become so critical that the phenomena is only known and accepted.

The immediate thought concerning electronics goes to stereophonic sound and other such hobbies; however, electronics knowledge is also necessary in the expanding world of space technology.

Playing teacher. Rich Zatorski explains about amplifying circuits to John Hoering.

It's becoming a littler clearer. Steve Morrison and Dan Kolbus have found the amplifying circuit interesting in electronics.

They'll light up the world. Bob Hebel attempts to put together some basic home circuits.

Watching carefully. Mike Thurich watches while Steve Morrison turns on the amplifying circuit.

Audio frequency comes in wave lengths. Mike Benninghoff and Mike Thurich demonstrate such wave lengths in an electronics lab.

Tension builds. Bob Hevel views Chuck Storm's attempt to operate his amplifying circuit.

"Gentlemen, start those engines!"

Precision is a must. Scott Gramback uses precision skills as he must set the type in printing exactly to the measurements needed.

Clean-up patrol? Students gather around Mr. Engerski as he explains proper maintenance of printing machinery.

Every young teenage boy's dream of understanding the automobile engine and learning to repair it or soup it up can come true in high school. The basics are stressed in auto shop, and gradually the student progresses to the level of intention. Some simply want enough knowledge to cut down on car maintenance bills.

Metals introduces the student to that wide field and leads the way to vocational machine shop. A headstart into a career as a machinist or tool and die man is possible, since acceptance into these critical careers is captioned by an entrance exam.

The study of woodworking eventually a hobby for many men, offers more than just a broad over-view of the tools of the trade. Future carpenters learn the nature of wood types, fasteners, and designs that will aid in the construction of anything from a Christmas jewel box to a shopping complex.

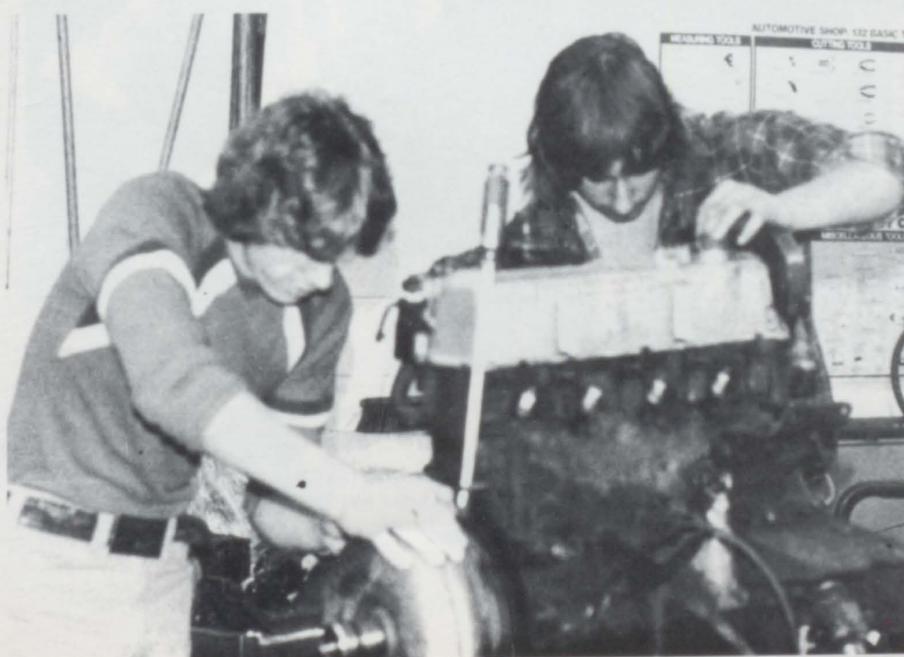

Get ready, get set . . . Mark Anderson sets up the letter press before the project can be started.

Glimmer, glimmer. Auto shop students are taught to sand down a car before repainting it with an air sander long before the shine.

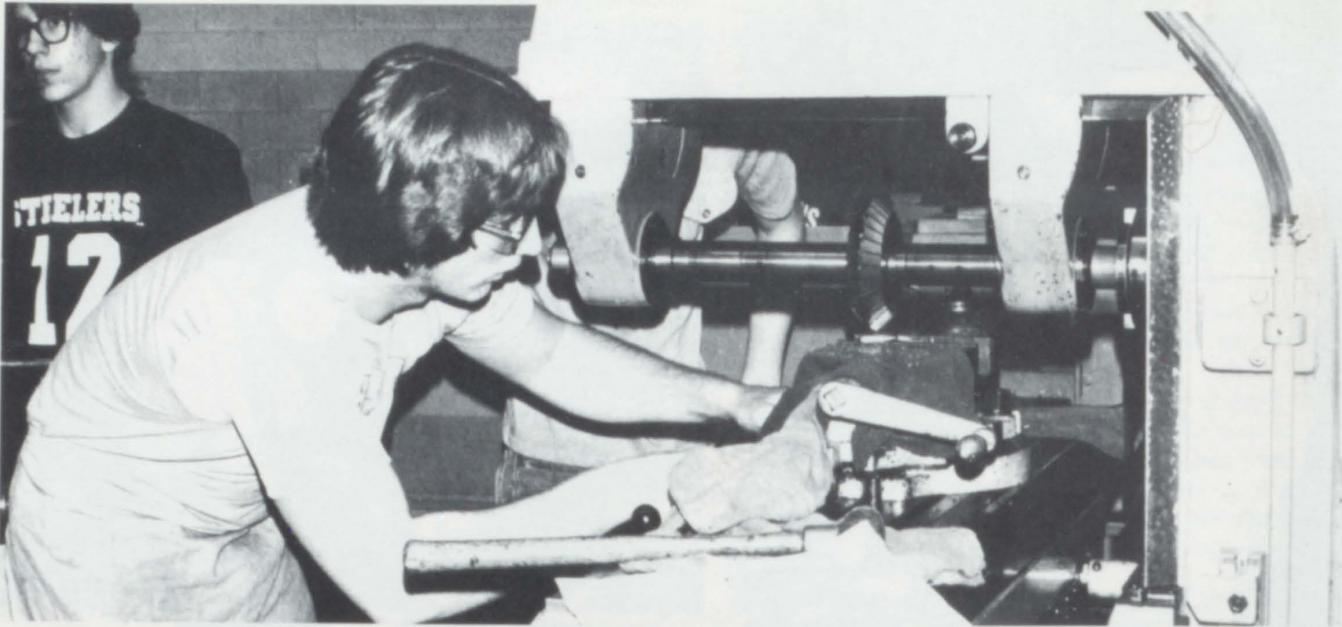

General tuning up? A performance tester is utilized to test the strength of a spark given off of spark plugs.

A Sun machine is not for tanning! Understanding how to use the equipment and its purpose is the first must in auto mechanics.

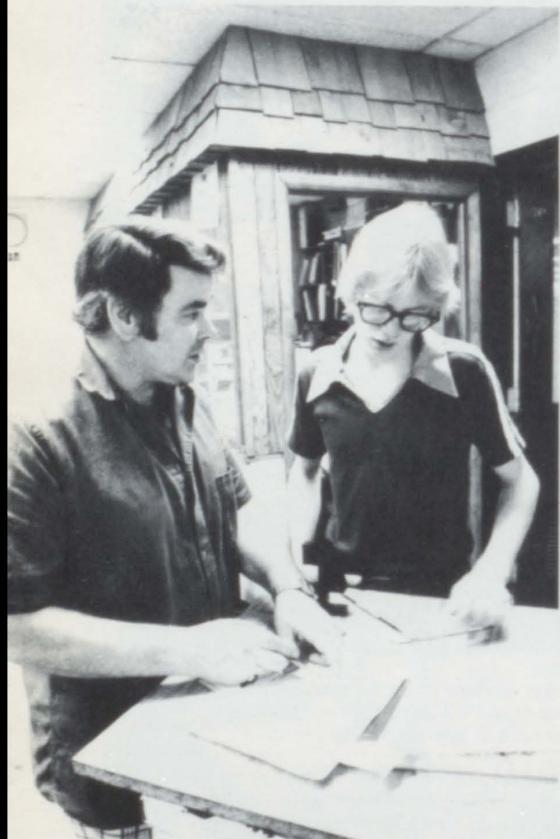

The shocks of a car's life . . . The standard procedure of replacing old worn out shocks with new ones, Gerald Neff adds comfort to the ride.

A rebuilt engine? That's not an easy task, as Myron Badger and Bill Stickley learn as they progress step by step.

Preliminary precaution. Steve Gibbs is careful to set the machinery exactly so that the finished product will be correct.

Thinking is half the job. Dave Keilman takes time to stop and think while he adjusts the machinery to the job needs.

Professional advice. Mr. Milby advises a student of his questions concerning a recent assignment.

It's like this. The finishing touch is explained to Gabor Keller and Scott Spevisak by Jim Heuberger.

Written word takes on new appeal

Written communications have not taken a backseat to oral communications; written materials are just as necessary as ever, in fact, they have reached a new land of importance. More men and women are employed in the field of written communications than at any other time in history, and the constant introduction of new machinery and techniques makes employment in this field almost impossible without previous training. This problem has brought about the offering of printing and drafting on a high school level. The mystery of the printed page does not remain a mystery long.

In drafting, general design and construction techniques, as well as blueprint reading and construction are stressed. Drafting is a favorite of those who have a quality math background, and a must for future engineers.

All you ever wanted to know about machines. Jerry Balciunas constructs a drill vice by using the horizontal milling machine.

A world of tools. Glen Matthews is working with the metal lathe during metal shop.

The proper set-up. Mark Anderson takes time to set the drill press before beginning his project.

No mistakes now. Tim Cantu carefully glues his project, making sure there are no mistakes.

Importance at home base

Modern conveniences are often so modern and complicated that a course of study would be helpful. A variety of cooking appliances alone, such as the microwave oven, crockpot, or pressure cooker, merit some teaching.

As the price of food escalates higher by the month, many families have turned to gardening and food preservation, and learning to sew can cut clothing costs in half.

Maintenance, child care, family living and inter-domestic problems are discussed and suggestions are offered with the purpose of anticipation becoming a partial cure. Information and knowledge pertaining to home related studies is changing at the same rate that others more technical studies are changing.

The dreary part. Well, the dishes are finally finished from that meal in home economics. Next week it's someone else's turn to wash.

Afraid to look. But the results are evident when Mary Gawrys opens the lid to determine whether she has failed or succeeded.

An assembly line of sorts. Each student is responsible for getting a different job done in the kitchen before quitting time.

The worse saved for last. Mike Lozano is nearing the end of her project in sewing. Putting a hem in a coat requires much patience.

A pinch of this.

You deserve a break today! After cleaning up the kitchen, girls relax and discuss the pros and cons of household cooking.

It's just too large. Mrs. Johnston helps Kathy Neil alter her pattern to her exact size before cutting the fabric.

I made the whole thing! Laura Dunn carefully puts on the final touches of her assigned sewing project, a dress.

It is never easy to answer the question "What is your favorite class?" But the one question that takes no time at all to answer is, "What is the class you dislike the most?" The answer 99% of the time is, "Study hall."

"Why?" we asked. The responses were many: no homework, too boring, nothing to do, had to take it, waste of time, can't talk, and the teachers yell too much. What do they do in study hall? It seems that everyone is either day-dreaming, trying to talk, pretending to study or attempting to pass notes.

Study hall is an elective, but all incoming freshmen must take a study hall unless past performance shows a B+ or better average. Also, any sophomore student with less than a B average and any junior with less than a C+ average is required to take a study hall.

An extra hour of study should be welcomed by all, but the students feel it is a waste of time. Often students who could really benefit from a study hall do not take advantage of the opportunity to do so.

Study hall should encourage the student to think and read. It is a quiet atmosphere where learning can take place. This time should not be wasted. From those students who favored retaining their study period came profound advice: Keeping busy during the study hour provided more than one advantage—besides keeping prepared for classes, keeping busy makes the hour go faster. Study hall happiness is like most; there is no way to please everyone.

Homework done in study hall doesn't have to be taken home, and Jane Roberts is well ahead of that game. Other students utilize time that is spent riding the bus to and from school.

Of course, if you have a secret it's better to put it in a note than say it aloud in study hall, according to Deanna Peters and Mary Dragos.

101 things to do in study hall ...

It looks like study, but Valerie Gorcus is catching up on personal correspondence instead of studies.

Last minute lash check saves a stop on the way to class for Shirley Kuzuba. Gone are the days checking make-up in privacy.

A million miles away from study hall and school assignments, Rich Rosinko is caught up in a daydream.

"On your own time!" Mr. DeMuth informs a student who is guilty of resting his eyes in study hall. The no sleeping rule was carried out even on Mondays.

Sculpting, painting, etching,

Expressing one's self. Gail White puts down on paper her talents aided by techniques learned about painting in art class.

Capturing the mood. Students quickly learn to relax and that talking with each other helps capture that mood into expression.

Best yet. Diligently working, art students plan wise use of their time to insure an even better art project.

From a little piece of clay. Sheila Powell works on the potter's wheel which molds clay into the desired shapes.

potter's wheel possible to learn

Art classes today gives students a chance to express themselves. It also offers them a chance to reveal their originality through creative expression. There is not just one type of art for the students to work on. There are classes that offer the students an opportunity to bring out their buried talents.

Sculpturing, painting, and etching are just a few of the many types of art classes provided. One class may be studying basic art, while another class studies colors and their relationship. Students have a chance to try their hand at the potter's wheel, the etching press, and many other art materials which are made available to them through their class.

Some students take part in art classes to improve on their skills; while others take part in the classes for the appreciation value. Students who do take part in the classes for the appreciation alone may later discover that they too, have a special talent in art.

Doing well. Mrs. O'Connor observes her students work, giving suggestion to better their art projects.

Anxious onlooker. Barb Csikos awaits her turn on the potter's wheel to see what she can produce using her talents.

Little to the left. Julie Iacino makes sure to use just the right hand shapes so her pot turns out to have the desired shape.

English diversifies into interests

English is the basis of communications and serves in the school as a backbone for varied interests. Students are expected to show their yearly improvement during testing at the end of the school year. These tests are scored against thousands nationally and aid in placing students and in graduation decisions.

As well as accepting the responsibility of teaching grammar, spelling, reading, literature, and composition, the English department this year added a offered full year's work in creative writing, taught by Mr. Pinerski.

Three publications during the year allowed students a definite preference. The Rune, advised by Mrs. Ballard, complied prose, poetry, photographs and artwork from the entire student body.

Other publications included Scout, the school newspaper, advised by Mr. Ossanna. The Scout was published semi-monthly throughout the year.

Were you listening? Mrs. Korem waits for an answer to her question from the students in her English class.

Use only a plus or minus. Mrs. Lewis answers a question asked by an anxious student about to take a test in that class.

The new libel law says ... Words of advice are given to Lynn Conley concerning the next issue of SCOUT by Dr. Clune.

They've changed it again? Carefully scheduling dates, times, and places for the SCOUT is Editor Holly Thomas.

Ma, I'll be home later! Lynn Conley & Kristyn Rehling put in much overtime in laying out the pages of the Scout to meet their deadlines.

I've lost that page! Renee Cataldi enjoys a personal joke while filing finished carbons of the 1980 Quiver.

It can be done. Quiver sponsor, Mrs. Hewlett, attempts to convince the yearbook staff that a deadline after Christmas can be met.

Looking for a new pet? Andrea Rooksberry tells her speech class some little known facts about a pet tarantula.

Just one more pica. Typing copy and captions is a necessity to a finished yearbook as Cyndi Crook demonstrates.

There's a B in the R's! Janet Lutgen and Cheri Marquiss arrange the index as final pages are completed.

Reading, writing and arithmetic

Historically, mathematics, science, and foreign language have been considered the subjects that stretch the mind. A famous person once suggested that a person, in order to get the most from life, should learn to speak another language as well as his own. And of course, the benefits are obvious: A true understanding of another person and their culture at a time when the world neighborhood grows smaller, not to mention another entire literature field opening up. Why study foreign language? Many simply have a curiosity about languages.

Mathematics teaching carries a heavy burden. From the ability to keep the checkbook straight to the need for calculating square yards of carpeting, the high school math class is the place to learn. Today the calculator, which was an earlier suspect of replacing math, has become complicated enough to merit its own class.

Without the proper background in science, even news releases today can be difficult to understand. It is beyond ordinary comprehension.

What is that? Laurie Schuch and Bobbie Rubarts team up in chemistry to examine the results from their lab.

Now let's see . . . Kathy Nisan studies the problem first before attempting the right answer in front of the class.

Bleep, bleep, bleep! A little assistance is given by a calculator. Once forbidden, the calculator is now considered a must in lengthy problems.

Careful, don't lose that. In science, a lab specimen is held carefully while a closer look is taken under the microscope.

Listen carefully. Members of a class listen to examples and instructions given them by their teacher.

Easy listening. Shawn Hawk sits back and relaxes while he allows a recorder to interpret the material written in the book.

So, what does that mean? Deciding exactly what the results of the experiment are is not always easy for Kelley Burhans and Jerry Anderson.

Ten more minutes? Oh! Pushing hard to get an assignment done can mean using that all important last ten minutes of class.

Is all that in there? Steve Gawronski demonstrates the use of the microscope in science class.

There's more to life than wheatus

Just ... one ... more ... Physical fitness begins with building strong muscles by doing push-ups in gym class.

What ball? Listening to instructions is a big part for the girls' physical education classes when they learn how to play crab ball.

Kick that crab ball! Crab ball is one of the more exciting games that physical education students participate in.

Mental exhaustion from classes, physical fatigue from late hours, and never having time to stretch is compensated for by physical education classes. Exercise routines, which are aimed at forming good habits while young, are utilized as well as a variety of sports.

Physical fitness has taken on a new impetus in the last decade. People read reports on cancer and heart ailments and determine to strengthen themselves through efforts such as exercising and jogging. Swimming is increasingly popular, since there are more pools available to the public and the sport is considered one of the most healthful for any type of individual. Along with physical activity, today's youth is more concerned about health.

Ready for a test? Memories are tested frequently over materials covered in the health textbook and lectures.

Some time for study. Part of the class period is usually given to the student for reading. Good use of this time will avoid homework.

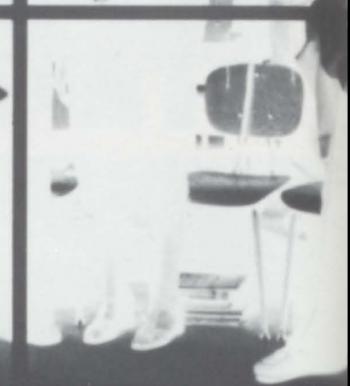

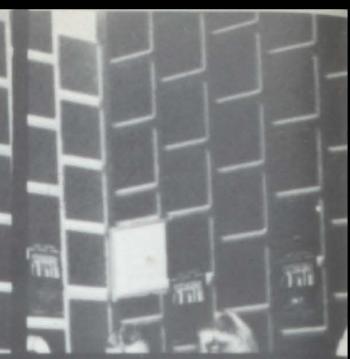

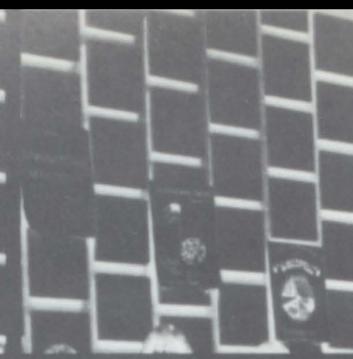

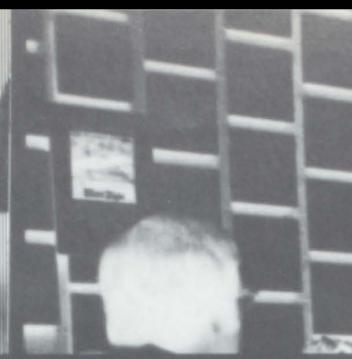

Bones. Muscles. Skin. Nerves. Many are amazed at the intricacies of the human body that can be learned in Miss Kennedy's health class.

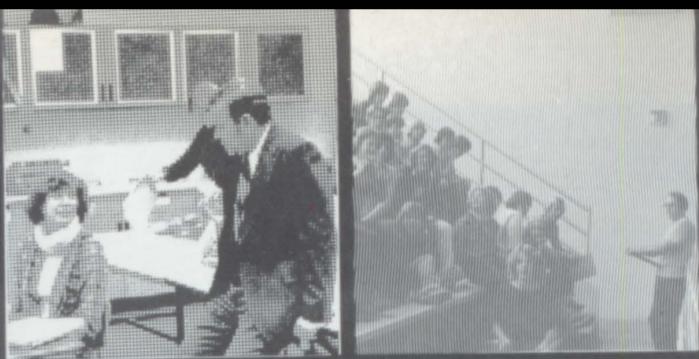

Sitting quietly. A class of Health I students contemplate their recent learnings in health and safety ideas.

Required for graduation. All students in the state of Indiana are required to satisfactorily complete health class.

The fibula is where? Most of health class centers on information found in the text and related films.

Selling, Saving; Planning . . .

Organizing is all a part of running on a full load. What a better example of this is our clubs, elective classes, and extra curricular activities. As the school year began so did the idea of money makers. Selling suckers, M&M's, candles, jackets, and a never ending list of other such articles, has all become apart of the idea of organizations. Along with making money, many clubs sit down and plan the year's activities with trips and other such goings ons to fill the year with meaning and enjoyment. Band and choirs plan ahead for contests and concerts, once again representing the school with their high standards. Other more intellectual clubs stick to the matters of scholarships, awards, and sending students to workshops like National Honor Society and Quill & Scroll. Those inclined to being creative, from building science-fair projects, to cooking a tempting meal, to even livening up the school with beautiful murals and paintings, may fit one of the categories of Science club, Home Economics, and Art club. The idea of organizing and planning is needed for a school, especially one that is running on a full load. Those who involve themselves with planning only help to make for a more profitable school year. By being involved one will not only be running with a school on a full load, but you yourself will have a full load to run on.

Well ... what do you think? M.P.C.'s president Mary Beth Gross asks her fellow members their opinions.

Perhaps some of the most diversified clubs offered are among those with the smallest membership. But they are favorites among their active members just as larger clubs have been favorites for years.

Although the courts have decided long ago that prayer has no place in the classroom, enough interested students of the Bible gather year after year under the direction of Mrs. Whitehouse to warrant having the discussion group. Difficult passages are discussed and new ideas of meaning are gained from others.

The Gun Club offers a chance for those students owning weapons, or exhibiting an interest in weapons, to learn about the care and safety of guns and ammunitions.

Audio Visual Club is related in its activities to the audio visual classes, which have as their responsibility the scheduling of equipment makes these students and their services invaluable.

MPC, Medical Professions Club, was formed for those students who plan a career in a field related to medicine.

Jobs, sports start clubs

The biggest day of the sport's season can be the day when the coach determines a player has accomplished enough to become lettered. Among the requirements for a letterwinner is the first and most important—playing on a varsity team. The excitement apparently doesn't depreciate, for nearly all athletes continue to earn letters after the initial one. Letterwinners sponsor the annual Turkey Trot and the popular Stroh's Pit.

Like many clubs, OEA and FEA are oriented toward a future career in realted work. FEA, for future teachers, offers activities like the cadet teaching program where actual teaching experience is gained at schools throughout the system. Under the guidance of a professionally certified teacher, the true experience can mean a big difference in course selections on the high school and college levels.

OEA, or Office Education Association is a national organization for those students interested in pursuing a career as a secretary, stenographer, or receptionist. Candy sale activities are participated in enthusiastically, since the earned money is used to help defray expenses for those who attend the yearly OEA contest, where secretarial skills are judged by efficiency and speed.

Trying to master the techniques, Dori Gornick practices the skills that someday decide contest winners among more advanced typing students.

High school clubs incite career goals

Preparing for a possible career in teaching are aides Debbie Matura and Celeste Lanning who are checking a set of quizzes.

Who would ever dream that an organization was the reason for choosing a particular career? Well, it's just possible. Many activities help to develop responsibility, leadership, and provide opportunities that don't show up in the daily classroom.

The FEA (Future Educators Association) develops skills from being teacher aides and by a cadette teaching program. A teacher's aide gains early experience by seeing various methods in filing, scoring, and testing.

Cadette teaching offers an early taste of sitting behind the teacher's desk by allowing seniors with a suitable grade point average to assist junior high and elementary teachers in an actual classroom.

OEA (Office Education Association), a national organization for those interested in pursuing a career in related office occupations, gives an opportunity for girls to learn of office occupational possibilities that they did not consider before. The office worker who has an OEA membership in her background feels less like a beginner.

In their least capacity, high school organizations offer ideas for spare time activities.

Indians' pride marches on

One, Two, Three . . . Keeping time and directing is of major importance to the band and Mr. Doug Jorden has his work cut out for himself in doing so.

As the band steps out onto the field before the game, the crowd stands. After halftime the crowd yells screams and cheers, pride is what it's all about

The Lake Central Band has been known for its outstanding performances in the past years. They have come home recognized with awards from the NISBOVA and State contests.

This year, though, the band didn't go to State or NISBOVA, but to something just as rewarding. They traveled to Ohio to perform during half-time at the Cincinnati Bengals football game.

The majorettes play an important role in making the band a success. Not only do they perform at half-time of the football games but at basketball games also.

The band does not only consist of persons who march, but also a smaller group of people called the pep band. The pep band sits on the sidelines of the basketball games to help enthuse and entertain the crowd.

Another group which helps make a part of the band is the pit band. The pit band performs with the choir on their mass choir numbers.

Choir sings for seniors

A singular voice is a solo; when it joins another it becomes a duet; add a third and it's a trio; quartets, quintets, sextets and octets follow; then the final product—a choir. At Lake Central, that choir may be junior treble, senior treble, varsity choir or concert choir.

Junior treble choir consists of freshmen and shopomore girls, while the members of senior treble choir are mostly junior girls. The varsity choir includes guys in all grade levels. The concert choir is selected from junior and senior guys and girls.

There are over 250 voices in the constantly growing choral department whose sole director is, Mr. Micheal Lewis. He also oversees the Madrigals and girls ensemble, who are chosen from the senior treble and concert choir.

We like to cheer here!

"We are the Cheerleaders!"; "Yeah!"; "We like to cheer!"; "Yeah!"; "That's why we're here!"

Cheerleaders, they do more than just wear pleated skirts and bobby sox. They spend many hours practicing cheers, mounts, and acrobatics, to keep the crowd peppy and enthusiastic. Even when the teams not in the lead the cheerleaders try their best to smile and encourage them.

Cheerleaders aren't the only ones that help to keep spirits high. The Lettergirls in their blue and white uniforms give color to the LC cheerblock. And the Pep Club members promote school spirit by making poster, hoops and selling Indian T-shirts.

Swimmers take your mark

The desire of every entering junior is to receive an invitation from the National Honor Society. Probably the most prestigious high school organization in the country, an invitation to this group demands more than high scholastic achievement. The entrant must qualify by standards of honesty, integrity, and self-direction. Community spirit and service, as well as good citizenship, play a part in qualifying members.

Two years young, the RUNE, a literary magazine established to give students other than journalists a chance to be published, published twice. As any aspiring young writer knows, there is something almost sacred at seeing your work in print.

Swim Club activities include year round competition in the national AAU, Amateur Athletic Union.

Thespians are world wide

Is there any club in the school which have members living in Greece, Denmark, and France? Thespians do. Exchange students have come from these countries in the past years and have worked to become eligible to be a member.

Not just anyone can be a Thespian; he has to earn it. It requires 15 points of stage work; 25 to 30 hours represent each point. This is an international honorary organization.

These hours don't have to be spent acting, being a Thespian represents long hours of helping put a stage play together. Which would include participating in set construction, make-up, lighting, sound, the orchestra, business managing and of course, acting.

Clubs offer competitions

Those high schoolers who choose to miss out on belonging to a club usually decide this because of misinformation: The popular conception that a club meets once a month on Thursday to practice Robert's Rules of Order is not true.

As many club members of N-Teens stay busy having food and toy drives, Flip for Sight and Heart Fund sucker sales, they have the satisfaction of helping others.

National Honor Society is a group of students that carry a "A" or "B" average. NHS kept busy planning for the quiz bowl scheduled for spring. Members sold candy to help raise money for the club.

OEA (Office Education Association) like many clubs were engaged in various kinds of activities. OEA members participated in the annual business contest in the spring. Members of OEA were occupied all year with having the Rock-A-Thon and other fund raisers for organizations that need donations.

District competition captured interests, planning, and practice times for members of the Concert Choir. Singing talents excelled over WJOB in Hammond and at Southlake Mall. The public who took a trip to the Museum of Science and Industry around Christmas Time were entertained by the Concert Choir.

Flip for site was one of the many activities that was assisted by N-Teens outside of the school.

Membership gain strong

"I have to go to an N-Teens meetings!" a girl says to her teacher shortly after a bell rings at 9:10 on Thursday.

"How do I know that?"

"Everyone is in N-Teens," the student retorts, and the remaining fourteen girls stand, gather their purses and books, and begin to trek toward the door. The new teacher feels a lot better when the next day finds a list of all the girls who attended the N-Teens' meeting. And there were 280 names!

Camping enthusiasts, as well as people more interested in being a spectator or fan than a player, find a home during club hour with boys' sportsmen and girls' sportsmen clubs. Various trips are planned to games outside the school.

Habla espanol?-huh?

"I dare you to learn another language so well that you can dream in it," a famous author once advised youth during a speech, and for some, the curiosity about how other people live and think is eventually the boost that sends the high school student to see his counselor with the big request.

"I want to study a foreign language," the courageous student interjects, thinking immediately his counselor will be impressed.

"Good," the counselor agrees as he shuffles through the students folder for test scores and ability ratings. "We have French, German, and Spanish. Which language do you think you'd be more interested in?"

"Eh," the baffled student stutters, "What's the difference?"

Fortunately, the question is not as dumb as the baffled student feared it was. Aside from their obvious differences, few people know before a brief study of one of the languages that French, German, and Spanish belong to a group of fine romance languages that have descended from Latin. The language clubs give further opportunity to learn important traditional customs, holidays, games, or sports, which cannot be fully covered in the foreign language class.

SGA, or Student Government Association, is composed of representatives elected by the various classes. Traditionally, Student Government Association is sponsored by the high school principal and sponsors Homecoming Week and its activities.

Speech and debate, sponsored by Mrs. Bertram, updates interested participants as to contest availability and strengthens ideas formed from the related class.

Pushing ahead—

Running on a full load—
In sports this applies to many areas.
School year is full of sporting events;
as one sports season ends there is always another season to take its place.
For those who watch sports events the load of team support, enjoyment,
and school spirit and on their backs.
For what is a sport if there is no one present to be an audience or if there is no one to give glory to those who have earned the credit. This load may be the most important one. But what about the load of the players? Hours and hours of hard work, determination, and practice goes into each sport. Along with this,

SPORTS

preparation from swimming laps to lifting weights is all apart of each individual sport. Training and skill are needed to be the best as this load can be quite strenuous. There is also one other load, this is the load of the coaches.
The transferring of knowledge and skills from one person, coach, to a great number of people, players. With this task is also the duty of teaching discipline, sportsmanship, and team unity. The coach can be a part of a quite difficult load also. But what ever load one takes upon himself, he should always take that load on with pride representing the school to the best of his ability.

New coaches produce better season

Every sport requires hours and hours of practice. For many boys, most of their summer vacation is spent practicing day after day. These are the dedicated athletes that chose to play football.

This dedication pays off at the first game of the season, as the team runs onto the field knowing if they win or lose, sportsmanship must be upheld.

Fall and football go hand in hand, and the Indians once again aroused the crowds and ended their season with a 6-4 record.

A new coaching staff was awarded to the Indians. Also, new uniforms, and helmets bearing the LC emblem gave the team pride and high spirits. Mr. Ivan Zimmer and Mr. Tom Ferguson are first year rookies added to the squad. Mr. Bob Komara a returning coach took the position of head football coach.

The season got off to a good start according to coach Komara. As a record number of boys went out and many returning seniors strengthened the team with experience and enthusiasm.

ALL-Conference were awarded to seniors John Doctor, Willie Penman, and Mike Cooper. Honorable mentions included seniors Tim Lukasik, Ron Johnson, Tim Kapitan, Mike Wietecha and junior Mike Hines. Doctor, Penman, Cooper, and Lukasik were also chosen for various All-Area teams.

Following right behind is senior John Doctor as he dashes up through the holes that junior Ken Wade makes for him for a big gain.

Getting a good grip is what senior quarterback Mike Wietecha needs in order to throw a perfect pass during the Highland game for a completion.

Pushing them way back is something the defense always psyches themselves up for as they force Highland to lose yardage.

A big victory over Highland is just what Head Coach Bob Komara wanted as he congratulates his team on their fine performance.

Detecting where the ball will drop, junior Don Ewell uses both hands in completing the pass on Homecoming night against Calumet.

Although the freshmen and JV levels receive small, if any recognition or glory, their talents and performance in time will greatly affect the Varsity teams.

This year the JV and freshmen football teams' records were nothing spectacular, JV, 2-3-1, and freshmen, 3-5, but the knowledge they have gained will prove to be beneficial for the Varsity years.

Teamwork was not fully achieved which is shown by their records. But with more training there is a distinct possibility a strong group will be produced. Only time will tell.

Girls sports have again added a new activity to its program. Stepping off on the right foot is how the cross country team began their first season.

Being the first encounter, the inexperienced girls were forced to learn the importance of running and conditioning by Coach Don Bugaski, to prepare themselves with stamina and endurance to successfully complete a cross country course.

With this knowledge, the team finished 5-4 with only losing to more experienced competitors. Senior standout Missy Duncan participated in state competition coming in 61st out of over 110 contestants.

Although it is their first year, the team placed sixth at regionals. The future looks bright for the upcoming season.

Making the move to the head of the pack, Loretta Czerwinski tries to place at the Merriville meet.

If the shoe fits, wear it. This cross country shoe fits Lori Struzik perfectly, which gives her the endurance needed for the sport.

Cross country is a lonely sport with no glamorous rewards that takes a great deal of individual effort to succeed.

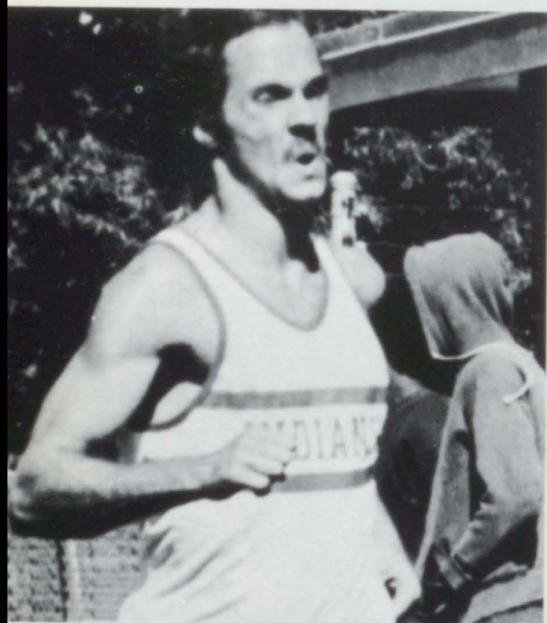

However, this year's team did far better than just succeed. They placed 2nd in sectionals, 3rd in regionals, and 14th in semi-state. Also, the hard work of junior Mike Blaize paid off as he placed ninth in All-Sectionals and contributed greatly to the team.

Also helping the team out besides by the coaching tips of Mr. Rudy Skorupa is Brian Cooper, Dave Sullivan, and Blaize who placed consecutively 11th, 12th, and 13th positions in the conference meet.

Next year's team looks just as good, for the JV team placed third in the Highland JV Invitational and the freshmen placed fourth and the sophomore placed third in the Rensselaer Invitational.

Running side by side are teammates Brian Doner and Nick Coppolillo keeping each other company through the strenuous course.

Taking a stride for the lead is senior Paul Pewznowski at the Highland Invitational where LC took seventh.

Pushing to your potential is important for a runner as senior Nick Coppolillo illustrates by his facial expressions during the meet.

Head held high is Steve Scott as he strains to achieve his goal by grabbing a high placing at the end.

Keeping his pace is sophomore Dan Nordyke as he runs steadily for the finish line waiting to be able to rest.

Keeping your eye on the ball is an important factor in tennis as it is evident by junior Jon Finwall.

High off the ground after returning a slam is number two singles Mike Gasich. Gasich ended with 7-6 for the year.

Warming up is essential before any tennis match as demonstrated by Jack Finwall. Finwall played number one doubles with Robert Hunter.

Using his winning style of serving is number three singles John Miner. Miner is a returning letterman with a 7-4 record.

Being in the top spot. Number one singles player is senior Jerry Anderson. Anderson has been working hard since his freshman year.

Swinging into the action with a forearm swing, is junior Scott Falcone. Falcone was number one doubles player with a ending 7-7 record.

Indian netters still don't have their own territory

Practice makes perfect, but if you don't have a place to practice, perfection seems out of reach as the tennis team has experienced for many years. The Indians experienced a rough season as their season shows 5-6.

The three returning letterwinners capturing the singles spots are number one Jerry Anderson, number two Mike Gasich, and number three John Miner. They each had their share of wins and losses throughout the season.

Teaming up for the doubles mainly are number one Jack Finwall and Robert Hunter and number two Jon Finwall and Scott Falcone.

The future looks bright for the Indians as there will be six returning varsity players. Also which will be the experience gained by the J.V. squad.

Spiking their way to victories

Seven returning letterwinners assisted the Varsity volleyball team in capturing a 9-8 record.

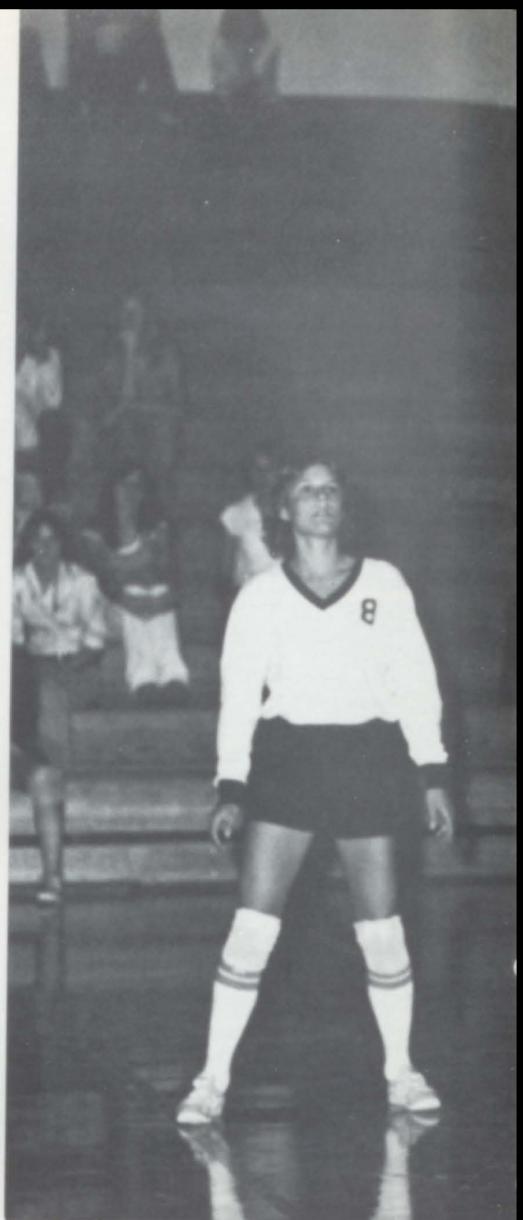

The team led by first year coach, Mr. Keith Hauber had a series of wins and many close matches only losing to very competitive teams. Proving themselves at sectionals is what the team did by falling to this year's sectional champs, Highland by a few points.

Cooperation, spirit, and teamwork is what kept the team going with their chin up. The assets through the season were senior players Vicki Ruark who was voted as All-Conference, and Deana Painter who was voted by the team as Most Valuable Player.

All in all, the team had a good year. They sold Reeses and Kit Kat candy bars to raise money to purchase new uniforms. Also, volleyball jackets were awarded to the senior players.

The experience is stacked up for next year as the returning players seen enough action to have the know-how that will lead them to victory.

Jumping high off the court is Vicki Ruark going up for a spike and making it unreturnable for the opponent.

Varsity Volleyball team: Row 1: C. Pisut, S. Sears, J. Bozak, D. Govert. Row 2: D. Gregor, K. Fehrman, D. Heintz, D. Painter.

Row 3: Coach K. Hauber, Coach P. Gallas, N. Kilander, V. Ruark, B. Gallas, C. Penman.

Go, fight, win, is expressed by the team during a time out while Coach Hauber describes the mistakes during the game.

Ace! Is sometimes the result of one of senior Donna Heintz's serve, as they are difficult for the opponent to return.

Setting it up is exactly what senior Deana Painter will do for her teammates to return the ball back over the net.

Getting low is important in a good bump as sophomore Kelly Fehrman illustrates during the Griffith game as LC captured the win.

Sidelines tensions build among the members of the Varsity basketball team in the first game of the season.

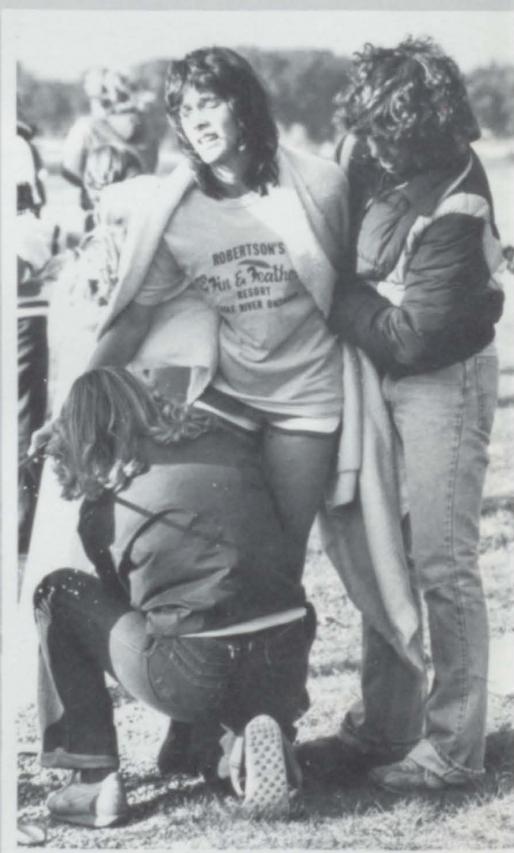

Whoosh! Using all her strength, Kelly Fehman spikes the ball hard, sending it down for a kill.

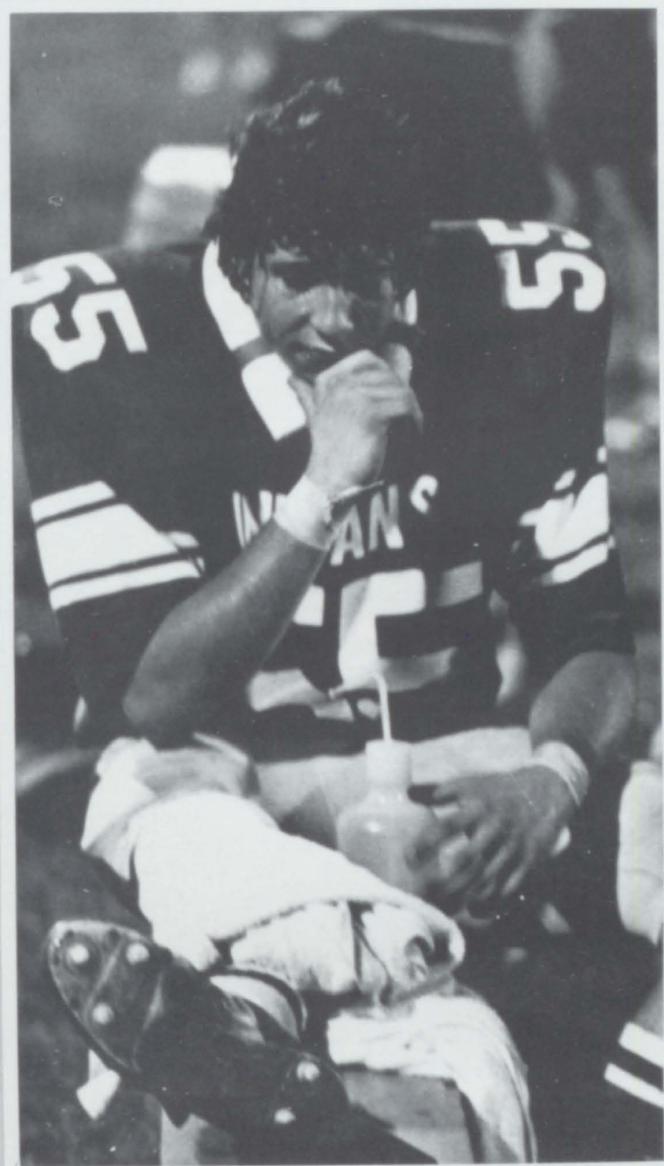

A deep breath and a good grip provides senior Tim Lukasik with the strength to overcome this test of endurance.

Straining for a perfect serve, Jon Finwall delivers the ball making it difficult for his opponent to return it.

The face tells a story. Athletes have good days as well as bad, and senior Missy Duncan knows the feeling of a bad day.

Stress, strain, and pain

As each candidate enters athletic training he must prepare himself physically, mentally, and morally for the arduous tasks that lie ahead.

The exhausting laps and the unbearable exercises are all in the daily routine of the successful Lake Central competitor.

Determination, spirit, and morals are all major ingredients in a Lake Central athlete. Through the long hours of preparation, the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat, he must bear the standard of Lake Central with honor, dignity, and pride.

Although performance and enthusiasm are of great importance, the athlete is not quite complete; for his mental abilities are truly needed. From memorizing the mechanics of his sport, to the strategy of his team, the accomplished athlete must demonstrate keen mental competence.

A "true" Lake Central Athlete is a model to us all; for he is more than a person with a skill, and a symbol of a school, but he is someone who represents through his efforts what each and everyone of us stands for and believes in.

Damaged, disappointed, and disgusted senior Ron Hedrick becomes a sideline spectator against his will, due to a leg injury.

Quick, agile, and on the ball, are the strenuous qualities to perform exercises during basketball tryouts, as Scott Morrison demonstrates.

The tread of many feet, are often heard on the track. Members of the cross country team stress to improve their technique.

Calm down, we'll get 'em is what Coach Tom Peyton emphasizes to his team during a time out of a game that they will still win.

Lost in the shuffle the ball accidentally gets out of sophomore Patti Farmer's control as she attempted to head for the basket.

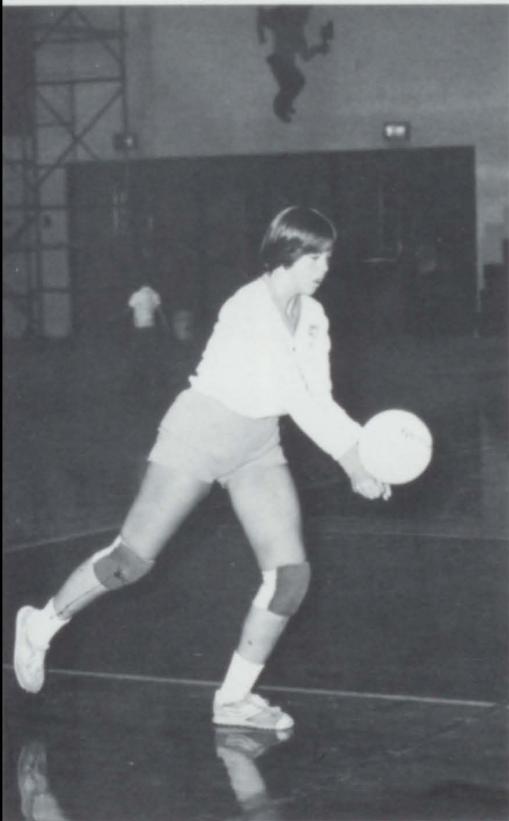

Bringing one down freshmen Kelly Hoover grabs the ball for a rebound against Morton, but it wasn't enough as they fell 25-27.

JV girls on the move!

Serving with perfect form is sophomore Patty Bohney as she prepares to gain another point for her team.

Setting up for another point is Sue Petrunich as the Indians spike their way to another victory against Griffith.

Determination and giving one hundred and ten percent is what pushed the JV Volleyball team to another winning season.

Coached by Mr. Keith Hauber and Miss Peggy Gallas, the girls again combined another impressive record of 15-4.

The JV Girls' Basketball team also had a fine season with a 12-2 record, being under the direction of first year coach, Mr. Tom Peyton.

If the results of the JV squads show any indication of teams to come, there is evidence that the girls sports program is definitely on its way up.

Hollering "I got it" is Nancy Devine as she sticks up her hand to return the ball to the opposing side to score.

Lady cagers have successful season

With only three letterwinners returning for the '79-'80 season, the lack of experience and a few bad breaks hindered the lady cagers' performance through the season and ending with a 5-9 record.

Despite the losing record posted, the team had a successful year in regard to improvement in desire, attitude, all-around performance, and the addition of a freshmen girls' team.

Playing the toughest teams in the area, senior Laura Dunn aided her teammates by claiming the honor of high scorer.

Under the direction of Coach Keith Hauber, the freshmen team had a taste of competition as they encountered their first season of play and finishing with a moderate record.

Bringing the ball in within shooting range is senior Vicki Ruark as she glances around to find an open teammate to pass it to against Highland.

As in all sports, strength is the power behind winning, and it's no different for wrestling.

Wrestlers aren't just a bunch of muscle bound guys with gross habits of spitting to lose weight; each is an individual athlete who has to fight alone.

The Varsity wrestling team finished its season with 6 wins and 5 losses from the strengths of such wrestlers as undefeated heavy weight Mike Cooper, 145 pounder Bob Tribble, 138 pounder Rick Daniels, 126 pounder Dan Bates, 119 pounder Rob Drozinski, and 112 pounder Larry Slagle. The J.V. team finished its season with 2 wins and 5 losses from the efforts of heavyweight Ray Makiejus, 155 pounder Andy Stout, 126 pounder Nick Mantis, and 119 pounder Bob Costello. The freshman team finished with 2 wins and 3 losses, which was exceptionally good since all the weight classes weren't filled.

Waiting for the right instant, sophomore Tim Ayersman sets him man up to fall into a two point take down.

Smashing his Lowell opponent's face to the mat, junior Larry Slagle tries a switch to get the points for a reversal.

Building a firm foundation

Being quick, alert at all times, fast, and having stamina are the techniques needed to play the game of basketball. These needed techniques were possessed by the Varsity Basketball team, as they captured many victories against tough competition, ending the season with a fair record.

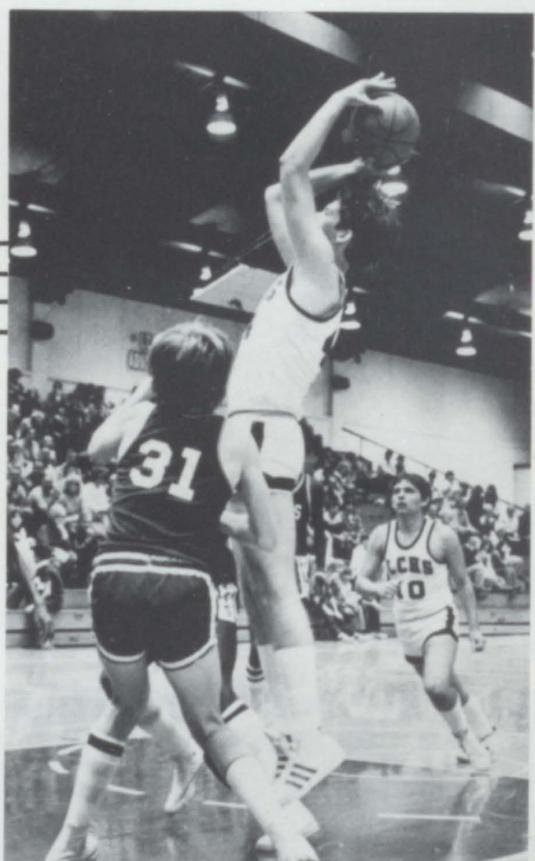

Under new coaching, by Athletic Director, Jim Hammel, the team performed well throughout the season.

With few seniors returning, this year the team strived for a gained experience which payed-off on the court.

The experience gained by the Varsity cagers' this year has built a firm foundation for next years team. And hopefully assure LC of another good season.

Varsity Basketball Team: Row 1: K. Byrom, S. Andrews, T. Pilackas, S. Morrison, A. Berglund, C. Lauer; Row 2: Coach T. Strawbridge, Mgr. B. Hobbs, M. Blaize, S. Richardson, Mgr. M. Radensic, Coach J. Hammel, Coach I. Zimmer; Row 3: M. Gasich, K. Hart, D. Fehrman, D. Sarros, M. Hines, J. Benak.

J-U-M-P, jump high is asked of senior Dirk Fehrman as he leaps into the air to tip the ball to one of the Indians.

One on One is senior Scott Richardson as he adds two points to the already winning score. The Indians sneaked by Hobart as they won 59-58.

Up, up, and away is senior Scott Andrews as he aims for the rim in order to sink his shot for two more points.

High and mighty is Dirk Fehrman as he casts the ball over the heads in search for a two point basket against Hobart.

Using "them" leg muscles is senior Scott Morrison as he dribbles past the opponent's block in attempt to score a basket.

The 1979-80 junior varsity basketball team captured the first JV Holiday Tourney title ever and share of the Lake Suburban Conference JV title ending with an outstanding record.

According to first year coach, Mr. Terry Strawbridge, the two main ingredients for this team's success have been due to aggressive defense and unselfish offensive play.

Improvement and personal contributions have been proven beneficial toward the progress of the JV team. Including sophomores Dave Sarros and Jim Benak who have moved up to the Varsity squad after the Holiday Tournament.

To summarize, Coach Strawbridge feels the players have shown great improvement during the course of the year, but realizing potential and consistency of play as areas of needed improvement.

The freshmen squads showed their lack of experience as they ended with a less impressive record. The A squad finishing at 9-8, and the B squad with a 8-7 record.

The 1980-81 campaign once again looks promising as the teams strive for the consistent winners' tradition.

Wheelin', Dealin', and Squealin'

Remember when you got your first bike and your brother jumped on it and started doing wheelies and skids? What does all that rough stuff prove? Well, jumping, shooting burns, and doing brodies are all part of Bicycle Motorcross. BMX has literally jumped into the sportslight. It's becoming bigger locally, with riders like seniors Dan Rolewski and Scott Ficek, sophomores Bill Ramsey, who took seventh in Nationals, Daryl Wormsley, who placed in the top 25 at Grand Nationals, and Tony Clark, and freshmen Paul Schweitzer and Tom Boyle.

Don't get upset when your brother starts his stunts. That brother tearing up your bike might someday be the next world champ.

Coming into the last stretch, Daryl Wormsley, sophomore, leaves the others nowhere insight as he takes first place.

Shooting the curve wide (212) senior Scott Ficek pedaled madly to pass 02.

Anticipating the next heat, riders look on as (17) freshman Paul Schweitzer leads the pack from the beginning to a first place finish.

Spills aren't always a hard landing as this rider takes a soft landing into the tires.

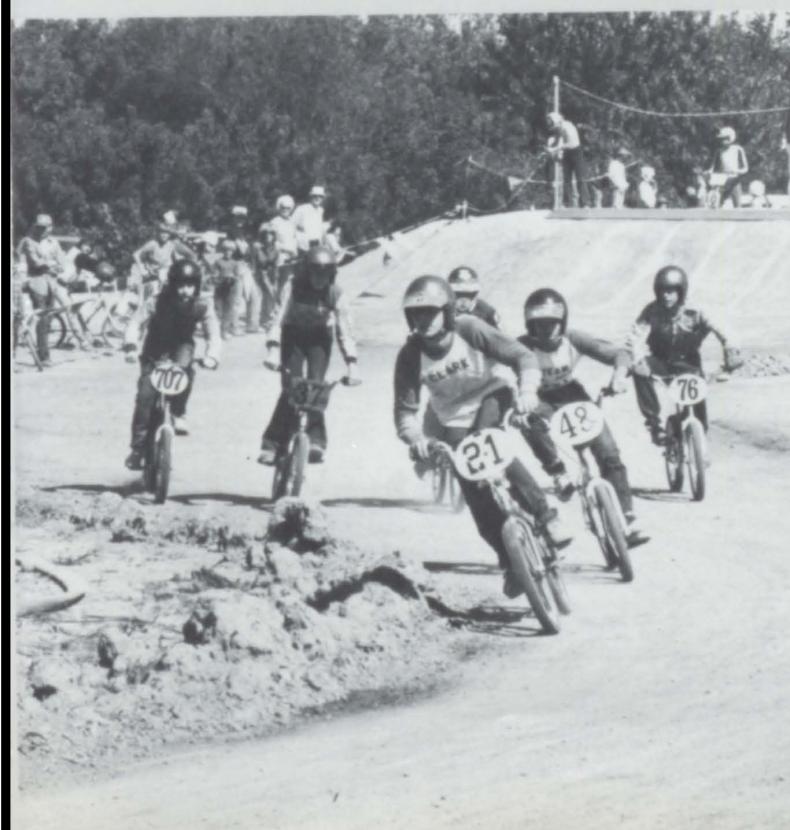

Determined to take over first place, Bill Ramsey burns the rubber off his tires to pass Tony Clark and finish the race with a first.

Struggling feverishly, Freshman Tom Boyle speeds to finish first place.

Swimmers Give a Hundred Percent

As the tension builds and the crowd cheers louder and louder, a swimmer knows that her coach and team are counting on her performance to be one hundred percent. As she stands alone, before the block, waiting for the whistle to blow, she looks down the pool knowing that eleven months of hard work and training will finally pay off. Mounted on the block, the gun goes off ... there's dive into the water ... legs pumping with all her might until she finishes that last lap! The girl's swim team crossed that final line with three wins, four losses, and three cancelled meets.

Coach Jim Walsh took five team members, Chris Beatty, Chris Juda, Patti Kerwin, Debbie VanderPloeg, and Karen Glandien to state and returned with a 12th place win from an outstanding performance by Chris Juda.

Tucked in mid air, Freshman Jill Heisner maintains concentration on the finish of her dive.

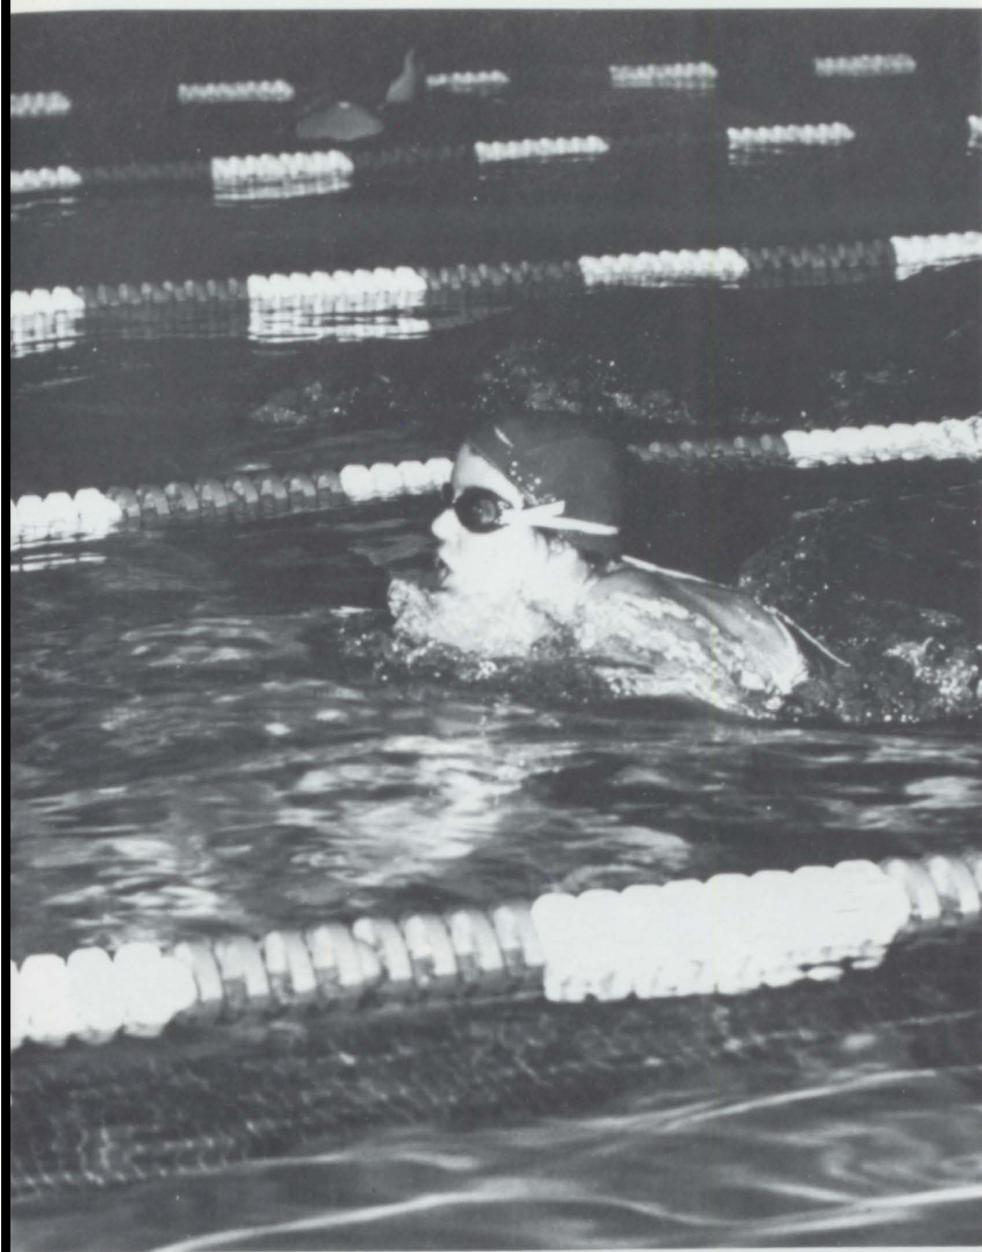

Anything goes in the first few seconds when a good start can help make the difference.

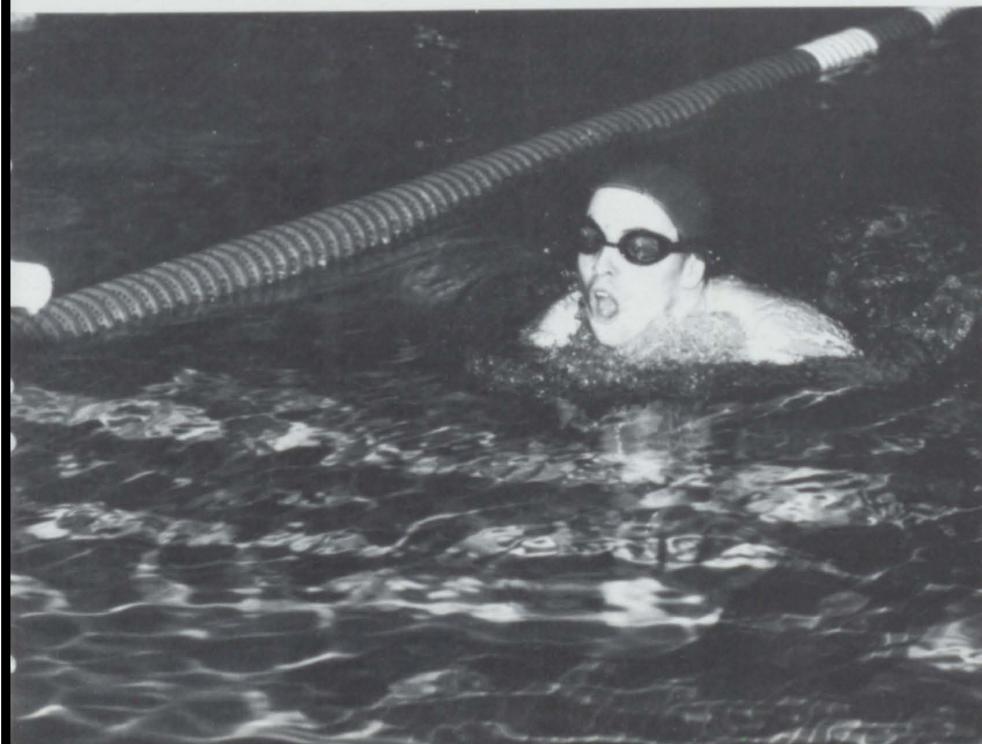

Swim Team: Row 1: J. Heisner, M. Olshavsky, J. Paloski, C. Misiura, E. Johnston; Row 2: C. Beatty, M. Katona, J. Bednarz, C. Manakas, C. Turner, T.

Moody, P. Kerwin; Row 3: L. Saterlee, D. VanderPloeg, C. Deliget, J. Camp, T. Strickland, C. Juda, J. Schweder, M. Jackson.

"Pull ... Pull!!" scream teammates as sophomore Patti Kerwin struggles to defeat her submerged opponent.

Half-way home, Jill Heisner prepares the follow-through of a classic dive.

Alone on her way to the final lap, sophomore Chris Beatty easily takes first in the Individual Medley.

Swimming team on its way to fame

To some, swimming is more than just recreation. Swimming, to the swim team means many hours of practice and training, building up leg and arm muscles, and being recognized as the best.

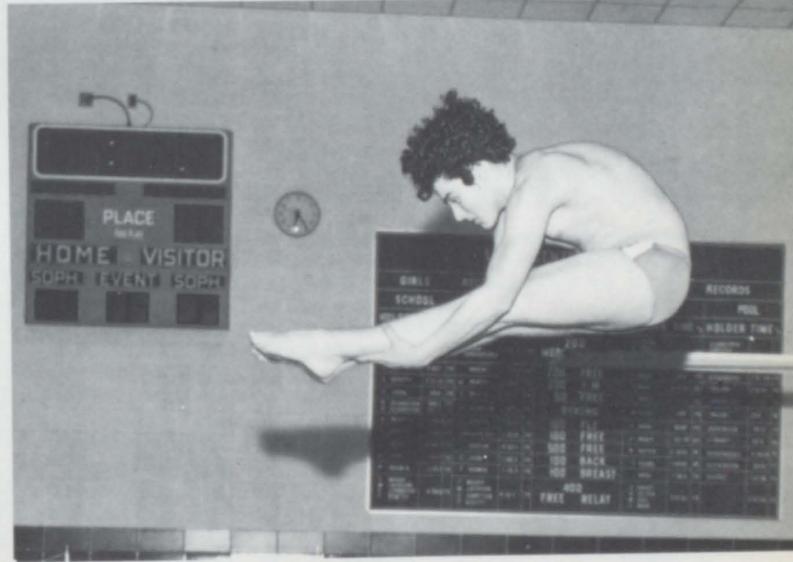

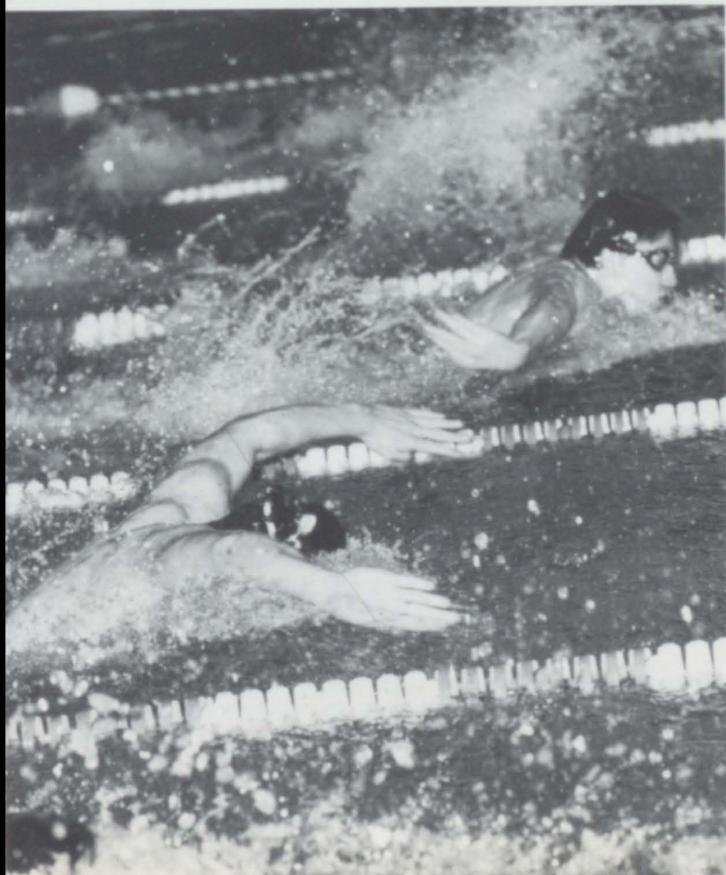

The newly organized swim team is on its way to being known as number one. The team had a fair season this year with a record of 6-5. However, the team is not performing like a newly organized team. The attitude, sportsmanship, and performance of the swim team has took on the look of a ten year veteran of the sport.

Many members have worked hard and their efforts have paid off for themselves and also the team. There were numerous school records broke throughout the season.

The hard work and dedication will bring high honors to the team in years to come, and the winners circle will soon be occupied by Lake Central.

Grab your ankles is what senior Doug Keck is thinking about in order to have a perfect score for his dive.

Neck to neck and moving swiftly through the water is what it takes to place in the 100 yd. butterfly.

Hockey spirit gains first division

At first there might not even have been a hockey team this year because of the closing down of the skating rink in Omni Sports Complex, but with luck on their side they found a place in Homewood, Ill. It didn't matter how long of a drive it was, or at what time the practices were because all they wanted to do was have a team.

They didn't lose their spirit of enthusiasm either as they ended their season with a formidable record and beating their rival Andrean both times 9-1, 6-1, and holding first place in their division during the season.

Delivering the puck, senior Kevin Cole gives it away to another teammate in order to get it to the opposite side to have a better shot at scoring.

It's a face off, as Andy Kerschbaum tries to get control of the puck and pass it to a waiting teammate in an attempt to score.

On the run and passing off is Andy Speer as he skates down the rink. Speer was leading scorer as he led the team with 31 goals and 15 assists.

Ready for action, captain of the team, Kent Govert waits anxiously for the pass as he hopes to score another goal for his team.

championship title

Crunch! Being pushed up against the wall, Kent Govert tries to scramble away to gain control of the free puck for his team.

The lockerroom scene after the game may show a lot of injuries being taken care of as Coach Dave Andrews patches up injured player Paul Basile.

Hockey Team: Row 1: T. Kennedy, K. Cole, T. Laurisch, P. Basile, T. Duquette, T. Kuplich, T. Speer; Row 2: Coach D. Andrews, J. Woods, B. Laurisch, A. Speer, J. Lindekugel, Coach I. Zimmer, K. Govert, A. Kerschbaum, Coach B. Washington.

Especially Homecoming night, the excitement and spirit is overwhelming. Varsity cheerleaders Cindy Gergely and Ann Kielman lead the wild crowd.

Saturday morning fun, is what the JV cheerleaders go through every Saturday morning during the football season.

Keeping to the beat, the freshmen cheerleaders do one of their favorite cheers to excite the crowds at the freshmen basketball games.

Pre game entertainment is provided by the Varsity cheerleaders which includes the introduction of the starting five.

CHEERING ONTO VICTORY!!!

What would a high school be without a football field, or a basketball court? What would a football or basketball game be without a group of cheerleaders? Fortunately, we do not have to answer these questions. We have three different squads, freshmen, junior varsity, and the varsity squads.

This group of girls attends every game with high spirits and high hopes of winning, even when the team is up against the toughest opponents. They cheer the athletes on to victory and also entertain and raise school spirit in the crowds.

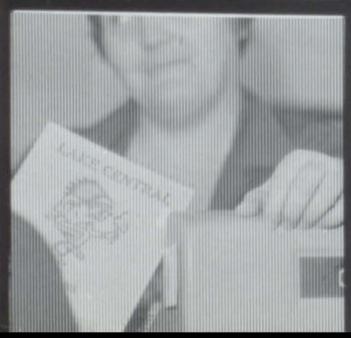

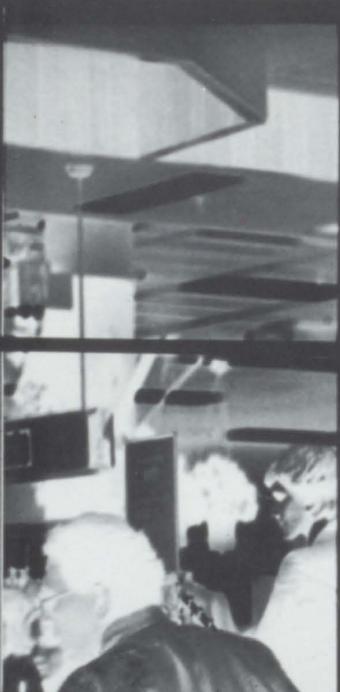

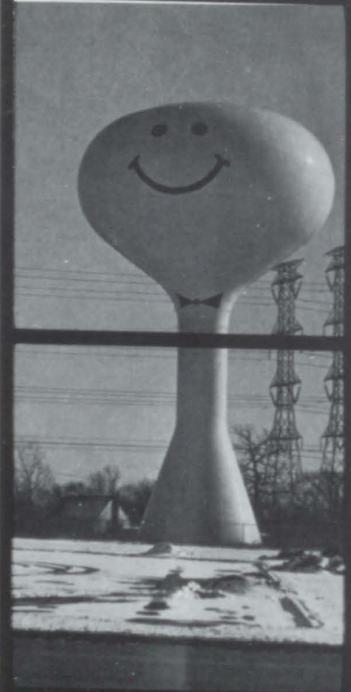

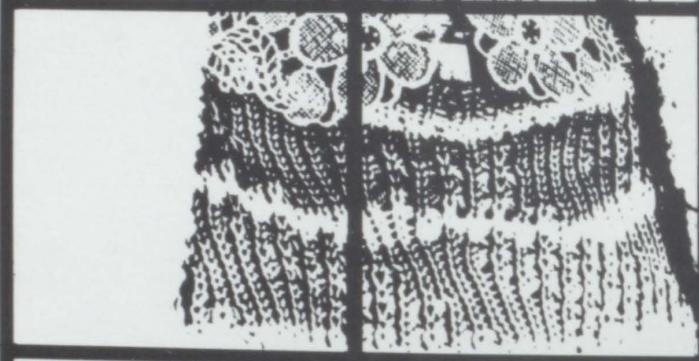

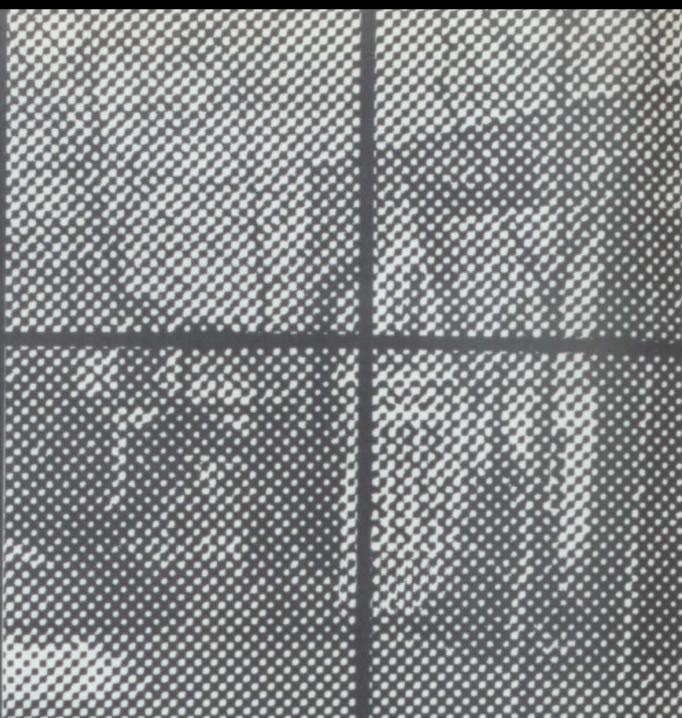

As sure as the football or basketball season comes year after year, so do these devoted group of girls called cheerleaders. "I-N-D-I-A-N-S," LC Indians are the best!

"I say release yourselves!" is commonly heard at the football games to rowdie up the fans led by Ann Keilmann and Shelly Kapelinski.

"I-I-N-D-I-A-N-S" is one of the specialties of both JV, and Varsity cheerleaders as they do their stuff during a timeout of a basketball game.

Ready, O'kay, is used before most cheers to get the crowd's attention. Both freshmen squads perform together at the football games.

Growing right along ...

Capturing the school year is not an easy job, especially when the school is running on a full load. Without our faithful and new supporters to the yearbook this job would be even harder. The yearbook staff is in great gratitude to those who helped and supported this year's Quiver. In helping us we hope to help you by advertising your product or service properly and to your satisfaction. It is our job to inform, to notify, and to persuade those who read the yearbook about your selling product.

Advertising

In selling our product, the 1980 Quiver, we hope to sell yours. Many of the sponsors have supported the yearbook before Lake Central even had a name, while other are still new supporters. As the communities of St. John, Dyer, and Schererville have grown so has the yearbook along with the school. With our growing community, the supporters of the yearbook have helped us to continue at the same rate, keeping the school running on a full load. Thanks to all of those who helped the yearbook through thick and thin; we are pleased to do business with you.

Good as Gold... Diamonds too!

Because both timepieces have cases of 14K solid gold (choice of white or yellow gold) and lots of diamonds. By appearance alone, these are breath-taking. But there's more. There's the Swiss-crafted 17-jewel movement which keeps time on time with unfailing reliability. (Would you expect less from Longines, The World's Most Honored Watch?) And there's distinctive styling so appealing to those whose standards are exacting. A parlay of precious diamonds and gold coupled with the gift of time.

sparkling speedy splendid

People who have moved away from St. John Township and return for a vacation after a few years are often astounded at the growth that has taken place. Ten years ago few businesses graced the edges of the U.S. 41 or 30. Miles and miles of farmland could be found in Lake County. But now, children grow where pumpkins once rolled, and the old potato patch is the home of some stylish shrubs.

New housing developments spurred the rapid building of several shopping centers, as well as a variety of smaller business establishments and restaurants. The rapid succession of growth led to the building of a new Lake County school to replace the old Dyer Central High School. Though Lake Central High School was not built in the seventies, it was added to several times to accommodate the growing student body. First the gymnasium and A-wing were completed, then C-wing opened, with the olympic-size pool being finished later than scheduled. A new football field added to Homecoming spirit, and still the enrollment grew, leaving Lake Central as one of the only county systems not facing a declining enrollment.

The first strike to occur among the corporations teachers occurred in 1970, but by the end of the ten year period, this strike had been followed by two more. The second strike showed the graveness of the matter when striking teachers manned picket lines in sub-zero January weather, and the third strike crippled the system for three weeks. A court injunction brought teachers back to their classrooms, but negotiations slagged and no agreement was reached for months.

Remembered always for three winters in a row, each bringing more and more snow, region lovers bought snow plows, snowmobiles, skis, and hoarded food in preparation for the next. But the decade ended with an unusually mild winter. Only a few inches of snow idled equipment brought in anticipation.

Sports fans will remember some sectional wins, like 1979 in basketball, and some special athletes, like Randy Campbell, a wrestler who went to state in 1978. The Theatre Guild can brag about "Jesus Christ, Superstar" for a long time to come, since it utilized former members of the Guild. Some will recall "The Odd Couple" from 1970 and "1776" produced to celebrate the nation's bicentennial. Red, white, and blue finally wore down after a few years' preparation for such an event.

The marching Indians saw an unexpected change during the passage of the ten years—one they and their director could not agree with. Bands took on the new and more severe appearance of drum and bugle corps styling, often bringing professionals to come and set up school programs. The previous yearly first place awards from NISBOVA were gone before the eighties.

And there were new faces always. After twenty-one years of service, Superintendent George Bibich retired in 1977, being replaced by present superintendent, Mr. Donald Guilford. Another familiar face left the high school during that period, that of Mr. Glen Eberly, who served as principal. Mr. Terry Jukes served as acting principal in the interim before Dr. Joseph Clune was appointed in 1978.

Late years in the decade will be remembered for a crackdown on drugs utilizing search dogs trained by Indiana State police. In January 1979 a damaging fire sent students home early and made excellent swimmers of many since the gymnasium facility remained closed for repairs for months.

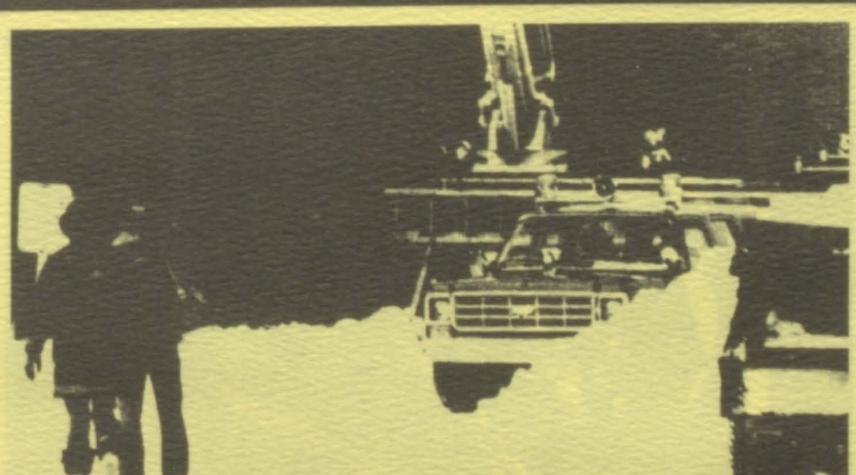

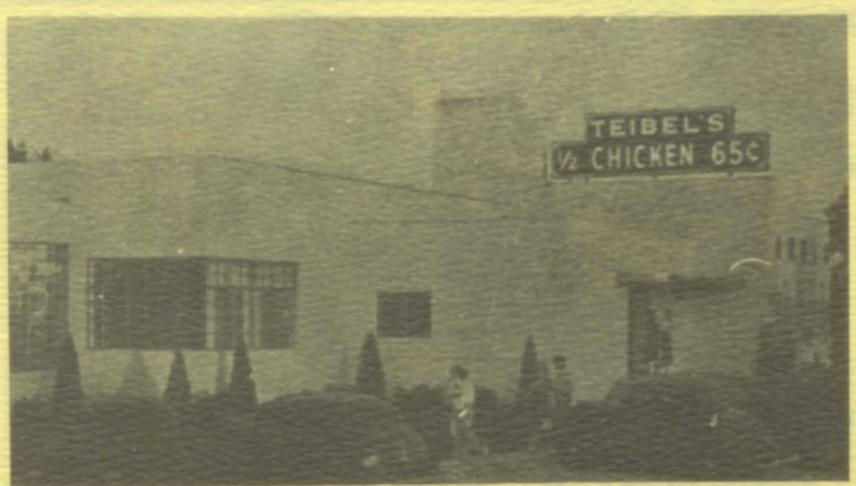

As high schoolers look back and see the decade in review, they can place an extreme importance on it, since this was the decade of their maturing. A fast-paced life, they readied themselves for fields of changing technologies, knowing their generation could look forward to wonders never before dreamed about. Small pox, for instance, once a rampant killer, was judged to be completely annihilated. When the capabilities to develop speech seemed at their peak, the necessity of slowing down occurred.

Some sociologists have predicted the life of the eighties. Because of high prices and various shortages, many feel there will be a return of homelife and the basic ideas that travel with it. More people are growing their own food and preserving it than were a few years ago when canned goods and fresh produce remained cheap.

spiraling spinning scholarly

Goes America, so goes the world? Perhaps. At some time during the seventies someone made a prediction that the price of gold would rise to $1000.00 announce. Everyone laughed. Then, late in the decade, it began to rise, reaching $780.00 in January 1980. It wasn't funny any more. People began selling their jewelry and hoarding silver coins. Panic began to crop up every where. Faith in the American dollar bill was apparently lost.

As gold continued its climb, so did the price of oil. Countries exporting oil formed an alliance, called the OPEC nations, and the United States was continually threatened. Feelings mounted and many became determined that we should not depend upon foreign countries for anything.

Medical science leaped forward during the seventies. The world's first test-tube baby was born in England, and the United States prepared to build a clinic to specialize in just these cases. Wonderful progress, depending on how the individual viewed it. Some were heavily against this unnatural scientific advancement, while others quickly added their name to the quickly filled waiting list of applicants. Modern methods of birth control and abortion became hot political issues as people and religious leaders throughout the world could not come to an agreement.

Cigarette smoking was definitely linked to lung cancer in laboratory tests, and studies of human history bore out the results. Still, people all over the world refused to believe it and kept right on smoking. In fact, women smoked more than ever before. By the end of the decade women also suffered from lung cancer more than ever before. Year by year, the number grew, and Congress argued that cigarette commercials must be banned from television. Anti-smoking groups organized and rallied with no smoking days-special days set aside to convince other smokers to kick the habit. Restaurants and public places began offering special seating for the non-smoker, and finally early 1980 heard the announcement: Americans, at least, were smoking less, finally.

Scientific advancement proceeded further than anyone had believed possible. The planet Mars was no longer out of reach. An American spacecraft, Voyager III, landed there and sent home photographs, shown on national television. Disappointment, though, ensued, for there were no little green men, and the surface did not appear to support life forms.

Later in the decade, the previously launched space shuttle gathered interest as it headed toward its home-earth. Fears were quelled when it finally landed near Australia without harming anyone.

Late in 1979 shocked Americans learned that fifty fellow countrymen and women had been taken hostage at the embassy in Iran, in a move to force United States government officials to return the Shah of Iran to them. The Shah, previously not considered such a close ally, had been admitted to a New York hospital where he was undergoing treatment for cancer. Iranians maintained the deposed Shah had stolen money from their government. But no trade could be arranged, and the Shah left the U.S., though the prisoners were not released. Christmas cards by the tons flooded the embassy in Iran, and American clergymen were allowed to visit them, but time dragged on into months for the hostages.

Religions came to the forefront during the seventies. One new church was formed claiming to need the use of marijuana as part of its ritual. Police and government authorities suspected it as a front for dealing with that drug and confiscated several million dollars' worth from church properties in raids.

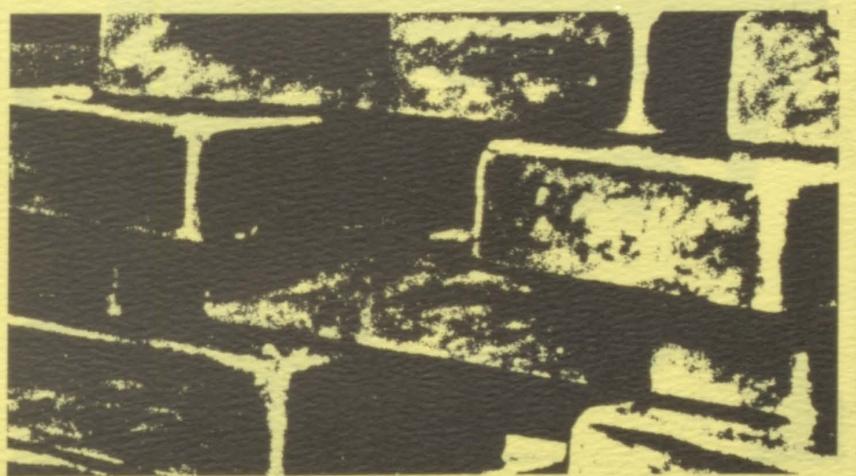

Since any one person can start a church, and since churches are immune to taxes, many new churches of scanty membership appeared for other than religious reasons.

On September 28, 1978, Pope Paul VI died and Catholic conclave elected a new Pope. Pope John Paul I was Pope for only 34 days, the second shortest reign in that Church's history of Popes. A second costly conclave elected John Paul II, the first Pope to be elected from Poland. This Pope thrilled Americans with a tour of the country giving masses and blessings and words of advice wherever he went, speaking out against women holding church positions, birth control, and divorce.

A church also was behind the mass suicide-massacre in Jonestown, Guyana, Africa. More than 700 members of the People's Temple were found dead from poisoning.

And, never to be forgotten, the world of style went through major changes. Mini skirts and go-go boots, hot pants—All these were the scene of the mid-seventies.

New sports became popular, like skateboarding and racquetball, and the old sport of rollerskating was revived.

seductive shapely shiftless

New Year's Eve 1979 held a special significance as most celebrations eventually got around to remembering, or trying to remember, a similar party ten years ago. It seemed impossible, almost sad, that the seventies could suddenly be a part of the past. Why, it was only yesterday. But the way they went out, the seventies have left many frightened to face the eighties.

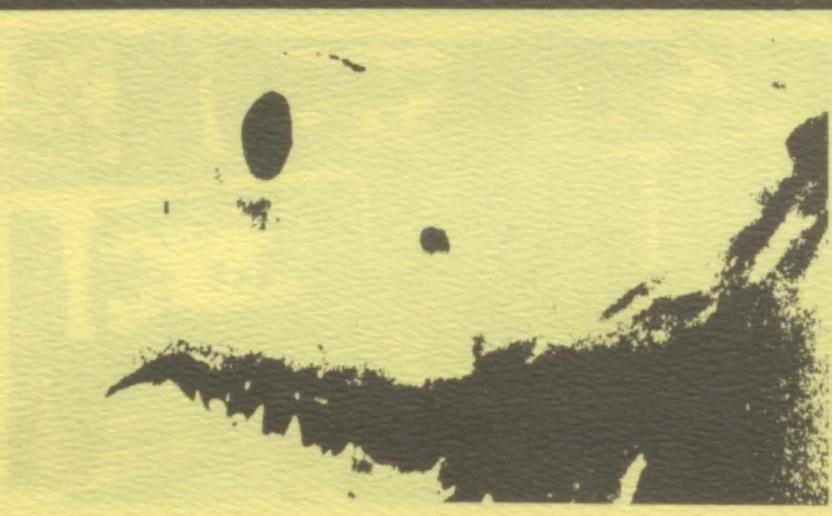

It seems that the seventies went about proving false many previously held convictions. At the opening of the now past decade, the American automobile was taking on proportions to match the opinions concerning petroleum products; it simply did not occur to anyone that the supply could run out. Oh, there were always a few kooks around who predicted disaster, but no one paid attention to them.

Then, almost without notice, gasoline was no longer 32.9 cents per gallon. How did most Americans take it? They paid it, of course, with comments like, "Ah, so what, I'm willing to pay fifty cents a gallon, if it goes that high." Eating words may very well be a popular pastime of the eighties, for the end of the decade had witnessed a progression to smaller cars and gasoline prices of one dollar plus—per gallon! And gone was the American symbol; the convertible, not manufactured after 1976.

Tension during the seventies did not let up. Politicians were suddenly not immune from crime. Watergate started a nation and proved that Americans don't expect their leaders to be normal everyday people. Nixon was criticized openly for his private use of certain four-letter words.

With continuing news coverage, it is difficult to realize that Patty Hearst was kidnapped way back in 1974 by the Symbionese Liberation Army. Later calling herself Tonya, she appeared to have become a member of their front. Every American had an opinion: was she a spoiled little rich girl turned bad or had she suffered under SLA hands?

Not all news was shameful. Mark Spitz came through, after a previous failing try, to win more gold medals than previous Americans at an Olympic contest, sparking a new interest in these contests, now broadcast by television, and spurring the growth of many Olympic-oriented schools in the United States,

nationally

shrinking sincere seventies

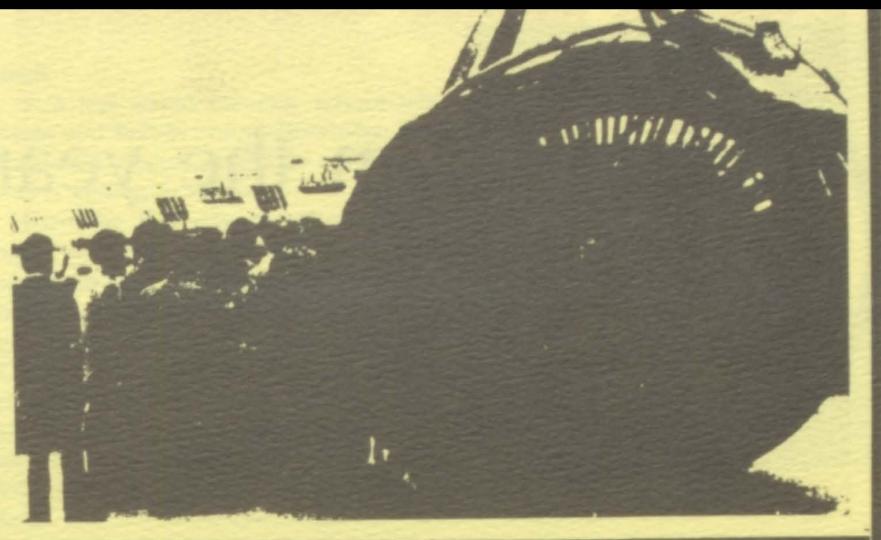

where such rigid practice and life-styles were once frowned upon.

After years of light-hearted entertainment in the movies, Hollywood really got down to business, early in the decade producing The Godfather, starring Marlon Brando, and later, Jaws, both of which were purchased and shown on television before the decade ended. Probably the most widely acclaimed television production was that of Alex Haley's Roots. Movies became the most popularly watched television shows, aside from sports, and theatres became less popular until late in the decade when new ones seemed to spring up all around. Padded seats, air-conditioning, wider screens, and several theatres within driving distance-can there be a complaint? Yes, they were all showing the same movie! And, the price ranged up to four or five dollars for a single showing. Add to that a buck-twenty for buttered popcorn and more for a Coke, and most guys were glad women's liberation was able to take such great strides forward in the seventies. Though the end of the decade saw women become able to apply and receive credit cards or mortgages in their own names, and many received salaries equal to their male coworkers, the ERA still had not passed. One woman made the newspapers for her refusal to make her boss's morning coffee, and women began breaking into previously male dominated jobs.

Chicago, as always, was the scene of much action throughout the decade. Chicagoans mourned the loss of their beloved Mayor Richard Daley and seemed pleased by his replacement Michael Bilandic. A young man, Bilandic was from Daley's neighborhood, soon married an attractive chicagoan, and looked like he couldn't be beaten. But the Bilandics were snowed upon and over. The new mayor took more blame for the Blizzard of 1979 than any weather forecaster, and Jane Byrne melted his chances with threatening comments after she was fired, going on to become Chicago's first lady mayor.

The worst air disaster in U.S. history occurred in May 1979 only minutes after take off from Chicago's O'Hare airport. Two hundred seventy-two people were killed in the crash of the DC-10.

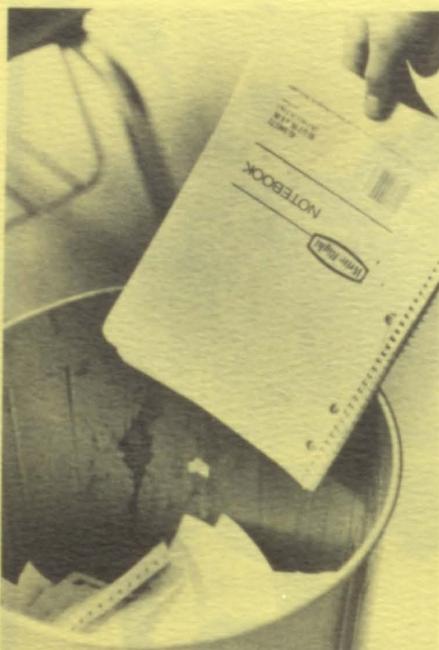

Millions of Americans viewed the beauty of King Tutankamen's wealth without traveling to Egypt.

Winding down the year

Just as a clock, after being wound up, will eventually wind down, so does the school year. Students and administration alike begin winding down after running the entire year on a full load. Some people that were just strangers at the beginning of the school year are now but old acquaintances, as the year rolls on. School was not all fun, much hard work and determination was used on school work, fund raisers, and activities from beginning to end to bring us through the year.

Homecoming took place as the school year started, which was closely followed by Basketball Homecoming. Winterformal, which was anxiously

No more homework! The last few days of school, after cramming for finals, become more leisurely and students get rid of their books and notes for the year.

Crowds begin to become only a memory at the games as the football season leaves and the school year comes to an end.

Cars, cars, cars... While students and administration await the traffic light on US 41, masses of cars desperately try to battle traffic, while making attempts to get home.

School's out... As the school year runs to a halt students rush to buses and cars anxiously awaiting summer vacation.

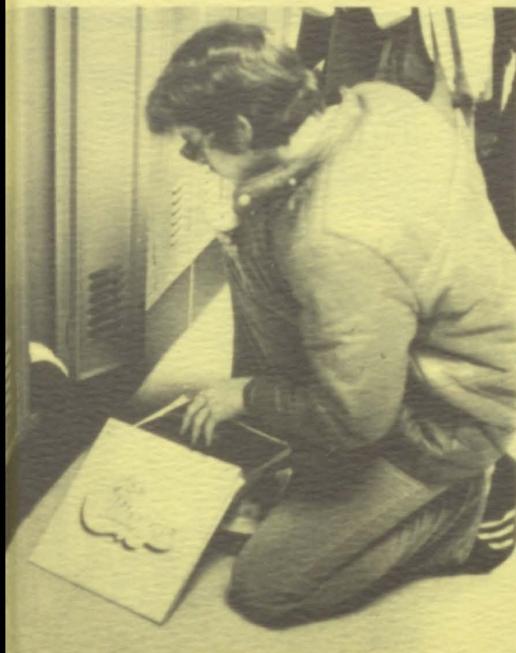

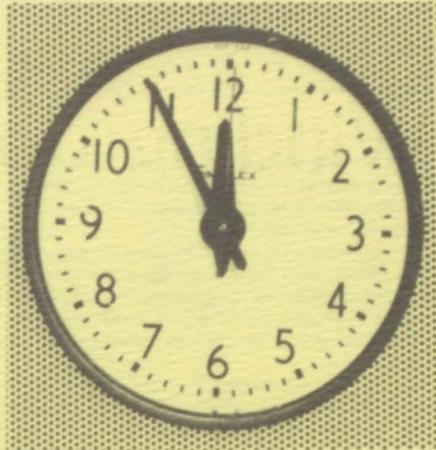

awaited, had taken place, and was all but a short memory now. Senioritis came about and before one realized anything, the day of graduation was anticipated by seniors. Then Prom, a sign that the school year was half over and now on its final days, took place. Senior night came about with all of its awards, then graduation, and suddenly being a senior wasn't such a good idea after all. Seniors began wishing that the cycles of their four years of high school could start all over again. Finally, the last day of school came, and everything comes to a close for the year. Some will return, and others will further their lives in new adventures, but has it all really come to an end?

In a few weeks summer school will begin and before one realizes what has happened, August approaches and summer is closing to an end.

Then the first day of school arises again and there will be new faces and some old ones, many of which had not been seen all summer long. Classes begin, and the principal gives his long talk. Once again we hear "Floyd Spore, please call the main office!" Then we begin to realize that the cycles have begun all over once again. Lake Central will thus once again be running on a full load.

Cleaning out lockers is a yearly chore for most students as they clear out all of their supplies before the closing of school.

Stop, go, yield, sometimes it is felt that the school halls are in need of traffic lights, as people push and shove their way to classes.

Fund raisers are a basic part of activities at school, shown by senior Carolyn Walker, a cheerleader, who sponsored the legs contest during homecoming week.

Lock it up, teachers for the last time put away their valuables and take home their possessions, while shutting the doors to their rooms for the last time until school opens again in fall.

Acknowledgements

After running the entire year with the load of putting a yearbook together, some special thanks are due to all of those who helped and contributed to the 1980 yearbook.

My appreciation is especially given to the yearbook advisor, Mrs. Shirley Hewlett (mom), for all of her helpful criticism, suggestions, and aid in time of need. Without a doubt she kept the yearbook staff together and helped to make this yearbook a reality.

Next to my thanks go to the entire staff and photographers. Each person had a special job and each took care of that responsibility with the great dedicated service that is needed to put out a yearbook. We had our ups & downs, but of ideas, terrific work, and planning all paid off at the end as it always does.

Thanks to Mr. George Kingsley, Herff Jones Yearbook representative, for seeing us through the year by adding special touches and helping us to understand all of our problems. Thanks are also in order for Root Photographers for all of their fine pictures, especially to Stan the man and Dan were always getting the right shots at our school activities. Thanks also for the beautiful senior pictures, once we got them.

To all of the coaches, teachers, and administration a special thanks is needed for your cooperation and understanding while the yearbook was being put together and pictures taken.

Thanks are also in order for two men, without whose help the underwater pictures in the yearbook would not have been possible. Mr. Gene Korba, thank you for the use of your underwater photography equipment. Mr. George Schulp, thanks for spending the time and your skill as a scuba diver in the taking of these swimming pictures.

To all of the parents of the staff who helped with ideas and who were understanding with all of our problems, thanks for putting up with us.

Last but not least thanks to all of the faithful and new advertisers for your generous support of the yearbook.
